3 IN BIRTH CONTROL CASE FOUND GUILTY

Salem, July 20—In a decision which was awaited throughout the nation, Judge George B. Sears in district court today found guilty the three defendants in the birth control case.

The defendants, all women, were fined $100 each, the minimum amount. They appealed.

The statute, which they were accused of violating, dealing with the sale or exhibition of birth control articles, prescribes fines up to $1000, jail sentences up to two and a half years or prison terms up to five years.

Judge Sears said the statute was clear and was supported by a Massachusetts Supreme court decision.

NO ALTERNATIVE

Until the statute is changed by the Legislature, or reinterpreted by the Supreme Court, it is the law in this state, he explained. No alternative but to find the accused guilty.

Judge Sears said, however, he felt the defendants believed they were benefiting humanity and acted under what they considered sage advice.

The defendants are Dr. Lucille Lord-Heinstein of Dorchester, who was in charge of the North Shore Mothers' Health Office in Essex street, Salem; Mrs. Carolyn Gardner, wife of a prominent Salem physicim, and Mrs. Flora Rand, a nurse.

After they had appealed, Judge Sears released all of them on $500 personal recognizance.

CITES THE LAW

Lawyers, physicians, society women and others filled the courtroom to capacity when Judge Sears came on the bench to read

Appendix 'Walk' Victim Is Dead

Charles Bergeron, Jr., 10, Lynn boy whose father took him for a walk instead of permitting him to be operated on for appendicitis, died today in Lynn Hospital.

Police, informed by neighbors, found the boy in a state of collapse, and after taking him to the hospital arrested the father on a charge of drunkenness, for which he was given ten days, suspended sentence yesterday.

It was too late to save the boy, as the appendix had burst and peritonitis developed. The boys mother is dead.

Two Youths Seized As Store Looters

Two North End youths, 21 and 22, were captured by police early today as they were allegedly looting a shoe store on Marshall street, North End. They are held on suspicion of larceny.

Watchman Trapped Four Hours in Lift

Trapped four hours in a stalled elevator below the fifth floor of the H. M. Sawyer Company building at Thorndike and Second streets, Cambridge, today, J. H. Squires, the watchman, finally brought firemen and police to his aid by waving his flashlight through a window above his head.

Noticing the distress signals, Patrolmen Mark Cunningham and Arthur Doyle, passing in a cruising car, called firemen.

Bitsy Grant Bows to Nazi Net Star

Wimbledon, July 20 (INS)—Heinrich Henkel kept Germany in the running for a chance at England in the Davis Cup challenge today by beating Bryan (Bitsy) Grant of the American forces, 7—5, 2—6, 6—3, 6—4, in one of two concluding singles matches in the interzone finals.

N. Y. Gangsters Kill Mystery Woman

New York, July 20 (AP)—The body of an attractive young woman, shot three times near the heart, was found today sprawled alongside the roadway of the Harlem River speedway, apparently the victim of an underworld ride. Her identity was not immediately established.

Her clothes were rumpled and disarranged and from their appearance the police concluded she probably had been tossed from a car as it raced along the old road, near 166th street.

The woman wore a leather windbreaker, a purple blouse and blue skirt of rayon or silk, tan stockings and blue oxfords. She was about 30 years old, dark of skin and apparently of Spanish or Italian origin.

MARCONI DIES WITH PRAYER ON LIPS

By FRANK GERVASI

International News Service Staff Correspondent

Rome, July 20—Reciting the Lord's Prayer and calling the names of his daughter and wife, Senator Marchese Guglielmo Marconi, famous Italian statesman and wireless inventor, died suddenly today of a paralytic stroke.

At the age of 63, the electricity wizard succumbed in his town house in Rome at 2:47 a. m.

Father Paloino Rappa administered the last rites and afterward said:

"Senator Marconi died reciting the Lord's Prayer. He called the names of his wife and daugter and held an ebony Crucifix in his hand."

POPE OFFERS PRAYER

News of his death spread sorrow among official and social circles at Rome, and also at the Vatican. Pope Pius after being told the inventor had died, prayed in his private chapel and sent his condolences to the famous inventor's widow.

Lynch 2 Negroes in Florida

Tallahassee, Fla., July 20 (AP)—Assistant Chief of Police W. L. Prater said two young Negroes charged with the stabbing of a Tallahassee policeman were lynched by unidentified persons early today.

Prater said the only information he had was that the Negroes were missing from the jail and that their bodies had been found on a highway outside the city.

The two Negroes were arrested Sunday on a charge of stabbing Policeman V. F. Kelly when he attempted to question them about breaking into a restaurant. Kelly, stabbed, is in a serious condition.

Seek to Identify Man Found Dying

Police today sought to identify a man found unconscious on the street at Washington and Dover streets last night. The man, about 40, was taken to City Hospital. Doctors said they discovered a poison in his blood stream. His name is on the danger list.

He was recognized as an unofficial guide, who makes his living taking tourists to Boston's historic spots, but his name and address were not immediately determined

$60,000 Fire Loss

Norwich, N. Y., July 20 (AP)—A fire which damaged four business houses at Sherburne, 12 miles north of here, was brought under control early today after a three-hou fight by Sherburne firemen. Damage was estimated at $60,000.

Japanese Guards Kick 2 American Women in China

Peiping, China, July 20 (AP)—Two American women were kicked and shoved, they told the United States embassy today, by Japanese sentries on guard before the Japanese embassy.

The women were Mrs. Helen B. Jones, of Detroit, Mich. and Miss Carol Lathrop, of Washington, D. C.

The American embassy said it was calling attention to the attack to Japanese officials, after depositions were made by the two women.

Mrs. Jones related:

"We were walking toward the hotel through the embassy quarter, deciding that was safest, due to martial law. We were walking in the center of the street. Suddenly we were terrified by a 'Japanese war cry' from the sentries, who rose up behind sandbag barricades. At least three sentries, besides the two first visible, charged us, giving Carol a terrific shove.

"Carol burst into tears, then the sentry kicked her in the side. Meanwhile, another sentry held me with the flat of his bayonet.

"In the midst of the confusion, I saw a machine gun mounted on a barricade staring me in the face. They made a loud clamor shoving us around.

"Finally they let us go, shoving us off roughly and giving me a final and very forceful kick from behind."

MAYOR, BROTHER SIT IN AT CODMAN PROBE

On repair work for George Robert White Fund buildings, which should have cost only $62,314, the Codman Hill Construction Company billed the city for $137,531—an overcharge of 120 per cent—it was testified at the Finance Commission hearing today.

The testimony was given by Mark Linenthal, expert consulting engineer retained by the commission to examine work performed for the city by the Codman company and to determine a fair value.

Linenthal resumed the stand in a comparatively peaceful atmosphere, in contrast to that which had prevailed in previous sessions of the hearing.

Although both Mayor Mansfield and his brother, Attorney Edmund R. Mansfield, were present, the latter under summons, neither attempted to interrupt the witness as the mayor had attempted in earlier sessions.

"USUALLY 120 PER CENT"

With Attorney Edmund Mansfield as his counsel, Mark Robinson, a member of the same law firm, Mansfield occupied the chair of President John I. Fitzgerald in the city council chamber.

Linenthal, in his testimony today, declared that overcharges on jobs awarded by the city to the

WALSH DEMANDS VOTE ON SENATE LEADER

Washington, July 20 (AP)—Senator David I. Walsh (D.) Massachusetts, today demanded immediate vote on the Senate majority leadership.

Aligned with him, he said, were three other New England Democrats, Senators Gerry of Rhode Island and Maloney and Lonergan of Connecticut.

The four New Englanders were prepared, he said, to support Mississippi's senator, Pat Harrison, to succeed the late Joseph T. Robinson.

Two other New England Democrats—Green of Rhode Island and Brown of New Hampshire—are expected to support Senator Barkley of Kentucky, President Roosevelt's choice.

In seeking immediate selection of a majority leader, Walsh opposes President Roosevelt's suggestion to delay the leadership fight until January.

The four New Englanders were prepared, he said, to support Mississippi's senator, Pat Harrison, to succeed the late Joseph T. Robinson.

PALESTINE DIVISION SEEN AS TRAGEDY

Commending the statement of David Lloyd George, former British prime minister, made to the Hearst newspapers, Boston Jewry today assailed Great Britain's plan to partition Palestine as an "admission of incompetency" and a "tragedy."

In his article which appeared exclusively in the Boston Sunday Advertiser, the former British wartime prime minister denounced the British plan and termed the Palestine report of Great Britain as a "deplorable ending to one of the most imaginative and promising experiments which the great war made possible."

At the same time the Jewish leaders hailed William Randolph Hearst for bringing the statement of Lloyd George to the attention of the millions of Jews in this country.

Among the Jewish leaders in Boston commenting on the much-discussed Palestine question today was Samuel Kalesky, well known attorney.

POLICE FIND ASSASSIN'S MOTIVE

By ARTHUR J. QUINN

Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Providence, July 20—Out of the secret files of Dr. George W. Webster, slain society obstetrician, investigators have gathered information that suggests a motive for his murder, police said today.

One of the two score telephone numbers among his personal memoranda may even be the key to the identity of the killer, they disclosed.

These things came to light at the same time that it was learned that a man, a mystery witness, was to be questioned secretly by two of the crack detectives working on the case.

CHECK AUTO NUMBER

Furthermore, two inspectors from the state registry of motor vehicles were closeted with Deputy Superintendent of Police James J. Cusick for some time after midnight, and while Cusick declined to discuss the import of the conference, it is believed they had checked the registration of an automobile seen near the Webster home on the murder night.

Further substantiation of the police belief that Dr. Webster had been in mortal fear of a murderous attack was seen in a report that for a week he had been racing from his garage into his house at night without even locking the garage doors.

This information came following the disclosure that the doctor had signed a will only two days before he was slain and that he had been

Mother of Youth Demands Police Probe Beating

Indignant over an alleged attack on her 16-year-old son by two Dorchester police officers, Mrs. Thomas Clements, of Draper street, Dorchester, called on Superintendent Edward W. Fallon today and demanded an investigation.

Her son, Owen, is in City Hospital with possible concussion of the brain as the result of an alleged beating at the hands of Patrolmen Timothy Sullivan and George O'Donnell of the Fields Corner station.

Following his conference with Mrs. Clements, Superintendent Fallon announced he would not suspend the patrolmen.

Fallon said he would have the boy's character 'thoroughly looked into' before taking any action on thee barges. The youth has no criminal record.

The officers said they went to 23 Arcadia Park, the home of Mrs. Mary Corbett, to answer a complaint that boys on the front steps there were making a disturbance.

The crowd dispersed at their order, but young Clements refused to move on and acted in a defiant manner, they said.

Clements declared he left with the other boys, taking a short cut to Draper street. Patrolman Sullivan followed, he said, tripping him and striking his head on an iron fence.

Sullivan grabbed him and was joined by O'Donnell, the boy declared, and one of the officers struck him in the face. The patrolmen then threw him into their prowl car, he said, and one of them struck him and knocked him out.

Held in $3000

Amesbury, July 20 (AP)—A man who said he was George F. Andrews, 30 of Gardiner Me., today pleaded not guilty in district court to a charge of breaking and entering a Salisgury store. He was held in $3000 bail for a hearing July 28.

JAPANESE FIRE CHINA ARSENAL NEAR PEIPING

Shanghai, July 20 (AP)—The Chinese arsenal and barracks at Wangpingchsien burst into flames, the Domei (Japanese) News Agency reported tonight, under shelling by Japanese artillery.

Fighting broke out at Wangpingchsien and other positions just west of Peiping at 2.30 p. m., two and one half hours after an ultimatum demanding Chinese evacuation of the area had expired.

Fire still raged in the Chinese barracks at 6 p. m. tonight (6 a. m. E. S. T.).

A thousand Japanese troops participated in the attack against Wanpinghsien, Japanese casualties were one killed and one wounded. Chinese casualties were not known.

JAPANESE ADVANCING

The four ranking members of the Japanese cabinet were in session to consider drastic action against China to force a settlement of the increasingly tense crisis in Sino-Japanese relations.

The News Agency declared Japanese forces were continuing to advance. Wanpinghsien is just north of the historic Marco Polo bridge of marble where the first clash occurred July 7.

Before the artillery bombardment began, Domei reported, Japanese planes flew over the city dropping leaflets warning the populace to evacuate.

CHINESE START ATTACK

According to the Domei, the Chinese started the attack just about the time the ultimatum was to expire. As a "punitive measure," the Japanese turned their artillery on the Chinese troop concentrations, the agency said.

After a brief silence, Chinese forces resumed firing, and then wave after wave of Japanese infantry was launched and the engagement became general.

Nanking, July 20 (AP)—Premier-Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek returned to Nanking from Kuling today, officials said, to take a direct hand in the crisis with Japan.

SEARCH CONTINUED FOR MISSING SO. BOSTON GIRL

Search for attractive 17-year-old Gertrude O'Brien, of A street, South Boston, missing from home since Sunday, was continued by police today. Her mother, Mrs. Anna O'Brien could give no reason for the disappearance, stating that the girl was happy and contented at home.

Mattern, Merrill Flights Face Ban

Washington, July 20 (AP)—Commerce Department officials said today there is little chance that Jimmie Mattern will be permitted to make a proposed North Pole flight to Moscow.

These authorities, wanting to prevent recurrence of such air tragedies as the loss of Amelia Earhart, said it also is doubtful that projected world flights by Howard Hughes and Dick Merrill will be authorized.

$300,000 Damages Asked of Unions

Washington, July 20 (AP)—Gundersheimer's, Inc., a bakery closed during a strike, asked damages of $300,000 from four labor unions today, charging them with violation of anti-trust laws.

The suit said ordinary labor complaints were not involved, that the strike followed the company's refusal of a union request to cancel a contract with a firm which has been supplying some of the bakery's needs.

THREE WOMEN GUILTY IN 'BIRTH' TEST CASE

Judge Sears' decision was as follows:

"The case was continued because the defendants had a very able brief and the court was given time to think over this complaint, made under Chapter 272, Section 21, of the General Laws, which says:

"'Whoever sells, lends, gives away, exhibits, or offers to sell, lend or give away . . . any drug, medicine, instrument or article whatever for the prevention of conception . . . or advises the same, or writes, prints or causes to be written or printed a card, circular, book, pamphlet, advertisement or notice of any kind stating when, where, how, of whom or by what means such article can be purchased or obtained or manufactures or makes any such article, shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than two and one-half years, or by a fine of not less than one hundred nor more than one thousand dollars.'

SUPREME COURT DECISION

"The only case that the court has had is the one of Commonwealth v. Allison, 227 Mass. 62, which is the only case cited on General Laws 272, Section 21."

Judge Sears then read the Supreme Court decision, as written by Chief Justice Arthur P. Rugg, in that case, as follows:

"The statute under which the several counts in this indictment are drawn contravene no provision of the constitution.

"Manifestly, they are designed to promote the public morals and, in a broad sense, the public health and safety.

"Their plain purpose is to protect purity, to encourage self-restraint, to defend the sanctity of the home, and thus engender, in the state and nation, a virile and virtuous race of men and women.

"The subject matter is well within one of the most obvious and necessary branches of the police power of the state.

"The means adopted are sanctioned by long-continued usage.

"It has been argued that these pamphlets were designed to propagate what is termed 'birth control.' Whatever may be said concerning that subject it is too manifest for discussion that prohibition of the sale described in the statute, of which this indictment is founded, is within the province of the General Court."

UNTIL CHANGED LEGALLY

"To be brief, I think the statute continues to be a law until it is changed legally by the legislature or by the Supreme court.

"I must, therefore, I feel, find the defendants guilty under the law and upon the evidence in this case.

"I believe they acted under proper advice and did not feel, themselves, that they were acting contrary to, and in violation of, any law.

"I do not believe they thought they were acting as a hindrance to humanity, but rather as a benefit to humanity.

"I therefore will impose only the minimum fine of $100 in each case."

KEPT BY POLICE

Defense counsel argued for return of the articles, seized by police in a raid on the North Shore Mothers' Health Office, but City Solicitor James Kinsella replied the police need this evidence for the trial in Superior Court, where the case now goes on appeal.

Judge Sears left the articles with the police.

One of the features of the trial was the appearance of several prominent physicians who, as defense witnesses, testified that, in spite of the law, they prescribed in certain cases to married patients.

DUTY SAYS DOCTOR

Dr. Robert L. DeNormandie of Boston, obstetrician, said he prescribed the articles to married patients to save their lives and protect their health. Dr. Malcolm M. Restall of Marblehead said he had sent some patients to the clinic.

Dr. Pier P. Johnson of Beverly, a noted surgeon, testified he did the same and said it was a doctor's duty to prescribe birth control articles regardless of law.

There was considerable discussion outside the courtroom regarding this feature of the case after Judge Sears' decision.

The leading police witness in the district court case was Miss Beatrice Clarke. Lawrence policewoman, who was borrowed by the Salem authorities.

POLICEWOMAN'S STORY

She testified she represented herself as a married woman, gave a fictitious name and told the clinic she was sent by a doctor who did not exist.

She said, inspite of all this, she was given a birth control article.

The defense contended only married women were aided, and then only if sent by reputable doctors.

A committee of 62 society women, doctors and clergymen sponsored the clinic. Mrs. Standish Bradford, executive chairman of this committee, who was a defense witness, was in court to hear today's decision and with her were many of the other committee members.

Find New Way For Detection Of Lead Poison

Detection of lead poisoning, or very tiny particles of lead in the human system before the cumulative effects have produced paralysis or other neurological troubles is now possible, it was announced today by Dr. Kenneth H. Thomson of the University of Michigan, one of the principal speakers at the second day session of the International Conference on Spectroscopy, at M. I. T.

Other important medical and scientific applications of the spectroscope were also revealed at the conference. Previously the scientists had been told of new techniques which made possible stronger metals for guns, a process developed at the Watertown Arsenal.

At this morning's session, Dr. G. O. Langstroth of McGill University told of some interesting work in studying physiological reactions with the spectroscope. Other speakers today included Dr. Farrington Daniels of the University of Wisconsin, Dr. James Owens of the Dow Chemical Co., Prof. Wallace Brode of Ohio State University and Dr. D. L. Drabkin of the University of Pennsylvania.

BATTLE RAGING NEAR MADRID

Madrid, July 20 (INS)—One of the most decisive and probably the greatest of all battles in Spain's civil war, raged today on the Brunete sector of the Madrid front, with thousands dead and wounded in fierce fighting.

Nearly half a million insurgent and government troops were locked in the combat.

After more than 24 hours of fighting, the loyalists claimed they had successful resisted the insurgent thrusts.

In addition to the trench fighting, artillery and aviation units of both sides were extremely active. Columns of smoke could be seen rising northwest of Madrid, where bombs and shrapnel tore up the earth.

London, July 20 (INS)—The International committee for non-intervention in Spain today reached agreement "in principle" on the question of posting neutral observers at Spanish ports, then adjourned.

MOTIVE BLOCKED POLICE

Every one of the Webster neighbors was questioned by detectives to determine if any of them recalled seeing the doctor returning home on different nights and if any persons were lurking about at those times.

From the beginning the greatest stumbling block in the probe has been what detectives believe they have now established—the motive.

They indicated to reporters what this motive may be, but pledged them not to make it public at this time for fear of alarming the person to whom the clue points.

It was with a hint of this motive in mind that during the entire day and most of last night, up to midnight, Miss Dorothea Gilligan, the doctor's blond secretary, was aiding detectives in going over the private files of Dr. Webster.

WOMEN GIVEN AID

Miss Gilligan and her chum, Miss Elizabeth Prince, have been pledged to secrecy by police and refuse in any way to indicate the turn the investigation has taken.

It is known from the attitude of the investigators, however, that both young women have given valuable information and that Miss Gilligan's aid will be enlisted again today as progress is made along the latest lines of the inquiry.

The so-called mystery witness, due for prolonged questioning, will be interviewed in some place other than police headquarters as soon as detectives have "run him down," they said.

This man's identity is believed to have been indicated by the motive, further established by the telephone list, finally confirmed by the check made by the registry of motor vehicles inspectors.

FEARED FOR LIFE

Strongest factor in this theory of the slaying and of the slayer's identity was that the doctor was apparently in fear of immediate death, as his will and application for heavy insurance indicated to police.

It is now believed as well that the reason the doctor spent so much time waiting around the Simmonds drug store just before he was slain was that he was afraid to go to his home.

In view of this possibility, detectives again will interview the persons who were in the store on that night, asking them to recall every detail of Dr. Webster's words and actions, no matter how insignificant they may have seemed on that night.

5 TO BE QUESTIONED

These persons are five—Horace Simmonds, the proprietor; his sister, Ethel Reynolds; Don Desmond, a theater manager; a man named Smedley, and Thomas Irish, who works at a nearby forge.

Any conjectures that the doctor may have been killed by a gun of his own were put at rest today by his widow, Mrs. Kathryn Craig Webster, who told police her husband had never even owned a revolver or pistol.

"Mrs. Webster said that her husband was a Quaker and had religious scruples against owning, or even using, firearms," Deputy Cusick said.

ASKED WIFE BE CALLED

Cusick also declared that a report that Dr. Webster had said, before he died, "Don't mix my wife up in this," was absolutely untrue so far as police knew.

"The only mention that the dying man made of his wife was at the hospital when he begged Dr. Carl Lindblad, the superintendent, to call her to his side," said Cusick.

The doctor's will, leaving every thing he had to his wife, was filed this morning by former Attorney-General Charles P. Sisson.

That will, as was disclosed in the Boston Evening American yesterday afternoon, had been drawn up in rough form a few weeks ago, and the final draft signed only 48 hours before Dr. Webster was shot to death in the hallway of his home.

In this document, the couple's seven-year-old daughter, Marjorie, is not mentioned for any legacy, because the doctor was leaving everything to his wife in the confidence that she would take care of the child, Sisson explained.

Reports that the will, in its final form, had been changed were explained away by Sisson. He said the alterations were not material, only technical, and did not change the original substance of the document.

The former attorney-general declined to discuss the significance of Dr. Webster's application for $25,000 in insurance so shortly before he met death.

FACED INSURANCE TEST

"It would have no bearing on the will, in any case, if a beneficiary were named," he pointed out.

The only reason why the doctor did not get the heavy insurance, it was brought out today, was a minor physical condition discovered in his first examination.

He was not rejected as an applicant, but another examination was scheduled, allowing a few days for the condition to clear up. Before he was able to take that second examination, the murderer struck.

Police were not inclined to place much importance today on the disclosure that a nurse, Miss Dorothy Lowe, formerly of Swansea, Mass., had been beaten and cut the same day that Dr. Webster was slain, but because of Deputy Cusick's belief that no factor is to be neglected in the murder probe, she will be questioned further.

According to the report police have on her case, the man punched his fist through the door of an apartment Miss Lowe had rented in a Bennett street building, grabbed her arm and pulled her so that she cut it against the jagged glass.

Abraham Hassell, owner of the building, said that Miss Lowe, on the day that Dr. Webster was slain, had said to him:

"Dr. Webster has been murdered. Did you see it in the papers? That man was my bread and butter. He gave me my last case. I don't know what I can do."

TELLS OF MAN'S VISIT

At 8 o'clock a man appeared at the house, according to the police report from Hassell.

"He punched his fist through her door and I heard her scream," he said. "I went to her apartment and she was bleeding from deep gashes on her arm.

"The man said to me: 'Don't tell police about this.' Miss Lowe kept saying: 'I want to die! I want to die.'

The police investigation centered on determining whether this attack on the nurse had anything to do with Dr. Webster's slaying or whether it was just a coincidence. They were inclined to the latter belief.

On the same day that Dr. George W. Webster was slain, a man smashed the glass in the apartment door of this nurse—Miss Dorothy Lowe—in Bennett street, Providence. Her assailant pulled her arm through the jagged glass, slashing it dangerously. She was a nurse for Dr. Webster at times. Police seek to determine if there is any link between this attack and the murder.

Inventor Developed Ideas Of Two Other Scientists

The world shrugged a skeptical shoulder and smiled tolerantly in 1896 when Guglielmo Marconi announced laconically.

Yet within a decade ocean liners were keeping in touch with each other and with shore by means of "Marconigrams" and hundreds of lives had been saved by prompt response to the old distress signal of "PDQ."

And just as the Bell telephone followed the Morse telegraph, so wireless transmission of the human voice within a few years became a reality.

As an aid to navigation of both the sea and air, as a method of keeping explorers at the ends of the earth in touch with civilization and as a way of transmitting appeals for aid when angry elements have wiped out material methods of communication with stricken communities, the Marconi invention has become one of the great boons of civilization.

HAD OTHER IDEAS

Marconi, like Morse with the electric telegraph, turned laboratory discoveries of secluded scientists into practical use. The actual discovery of radio, from a purely scientific standpoint, goes back half a century before Marconi.

"Hertzian waves" were the immediate forerunners of the wireless transmission of code signals. They were named for Heinrich R. Hertz, a German physicist who, by experiments between 1885 and 1889 was the first to prove that electrical waves would radiate from any system from which electric oscillation was produced.

Hertz thus gave life to a theory advanced by James C. Maxwell (1831-1879), a famous British physicist, who developed to a remarkable degree ideas evolved by Lord Kelvin. The latter, in 1853, had proved that discharge from a condenser is oscillatory, a theory evolved in 1842 by Joseph Henry, a professor of Princeton University.

NOT A MUSICIAN

Marconi's father insisted that his son study music. Apparatus in the home attic which the youth had designed and made himself aroused the parental ire and he frequently threatened to pitch it all out the window, especially when the son proved anything but a success as a music student.

But like many another budding genius, young Marconi had a source of inspiration and practical help in his mother. Born Annie Jameson, of an Irish family, she had gone to Italy against the wishes of her parents to marry Giuseppe Marconi, a banker. She granted her son's wish to study physics and enrolled him with Prof. Vincenzo Rosa. She also helped him set up a workroom at the family villa in Pontebbio.

In the spring of 1896 the Marconi wireless system was born. The youthful inventor—he was only 21 —had found that two rods placed upright in the earth at a determined distance from each other would radiate electric impulses in accord with the laws governing the Hertzian waves.

He had established his transmitter near the window of the barn. The receiver was several hundred feet away and out of sight.

Giuseppe Vornelli, the carpenter assistant, was at the receiving end armed with a rifle. If he saw a magnetic arm vibrate he was to fire the gun.

Marconi pressed the telegraph key thrice, sending three dots, the letter "S" of the Morse code. A second later he heard the shot and knew that wireless telegraphy had been started on its way to practicability.

Italy was so skeptical of the usefulness of the discovery that Signora Marconi took her son to England. There, with the aid of her relatives, he was granted the first patent for a practical system of wireless telegraphy, this being in 1896 when he was 22 years old.

MESSAGES IN 1901

Marconi's first wireless communication in England was between Penarth and Weston. Three years later he spanned the channel, establishing contact between England and France. Thereafter the British and Italian admiralties and the principal shipping companies adopted his system.

In 1901 messages were sent between Cornwall and St. Catherine's

Life saving and salvage of millions of tons of cargoes became of frequent occurrence as distressed vessels summoned aid from sister craft. The first great example of this came on January 23, 1909, when the steamer Republic was sunk in a collision with the Italian liner Florida off Nantucket in a fog. Only six lives were lost and several hundred others were saved through the use of wireless. USE OF S O S

It was soon after this event that "S O S" was substituted for the earlier call because it was easier to send its three dots, three dashes and three dots than to transmit the more complicated "P D Q" letters of the international code.

In 1912 the Titantic sank. More than a thousand survivors were landed in New York. They learned that Marconi was in the city, marched in a body to his hotel, cheered him and cried:

"We owe our lives to you."

Marconi was born in Bologna, Italy, April 25, 1874. He spent his youth in Bologna, Leghorn and Pisa, studying in the schools of those cities and also in the University of Bologna.

He married, first, Beatrice O'Brien, sister of Lord Inchiquin, at St. George's Church, London, in 1905. They had a son and two daughters. His wife obtained a divorce in 1924, taking advantage of the laws of the city of Fiume before it was annexed to Italy, where divorce is not permitted.

She had been a lady-in-waiting to the queen, but after her re-marriage to Marquis Liborio Marigoni, resigned her post. The shadow on this union was removed later when Marconi obtained an annulment of the first marriage from the Vatican.

This permitted him to re-marry and he took for his second wife, in 1930, the Countess Cristina Bezzi-Scale.

In the summer of 1935, when the Ethiopian war impended, wide interest was aroused by rumors that Marconi had worked out an invention of great military value. He explained his apparatus to King Victor Emmanuel and demonstrated it to Mussolini and high army officers at Fort Bracchi, near Rome.

The nature of this device was not revealed. Some of Marconi's friends believed it was an application of microwave communication to army needs.

While Marconi's creative work was limited to his official duties and he always appeared in those years as a tired man, he engaged in many activities. In September, 1930, he lectured to the Italian Society for the Advancement of Science on the phenomena accompanying propagation of electric waves.

In July, 1930, the inventor became the father of a daughter She was baptized Elena by Cardinal Eugenio Pacelli, papal secretary of state, Queen Elena of Italy was the godmother.

SENATE LEADER VOTE URGED BY WALSH

Green, on the other hand, are expected to vote for the judicial reorganization bill.

In announcing he would support Harrison, "for the senior candidate for the leadership, whoever he may be," Walsh said he believed the Mississippian represents the mission of the Democratic party of any of its Southern members.

The Massachusetts senator, who is preparing a speech in opposition to the court plan, hopes the court bill will be re-committed to the Judiciary Committee.

Court Plan Conference Sought Anew in Senate

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, July 20—The hunt for a face-saving compromise in the embittered court reorganization fight was in full swing again today as the Senate returned to its labors, leaderless, divided, and threatened with early voting.

No such compromise has been found, despite diligent efforts on all sides. The alternative is a fight to the finish, which a good many uneasy Democrats wish to avoid on personal as well as on party grounds. The party breach already is so wide any extension of it would augur no good for the part in 1938 and 1940.

One suggested plan, whereby Congress would approve the court bill as it stands but make it inapplicable to the present membership of the Supreme Court, found little favor in any quarter.

FINAL VOTE DELAYED

Democratic dissidents returned from the Robinson funeral prepared to back Senator Pat Harrison (Miss.) vacant leadership, and then vote on recommitting the bill to the Judiciary committee. They are not willing to vote on the bill itself for passage at this time, because they believe that time is in their favor and the longer a final vote can be delayed, the better their chances of beating it.

Although the opposition had indicated to press for a recommittal vote today, it was considered likely this would be deferred until after the leadership question is settled.

The Democratic caucus tomorrow to choose between Harrison and Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, recipient of Roosevelt's "Dead Alben" letter last week, in which the President called upon his supporters to push the court fight to a vote.

The race was so close, however, the outcome appeared in doubt, despite conflicting claims of victory from the rival camps.

ACTION ON VETO

In the interim, the Senate may act on the President's veto of the farm loan interest bill which the House overrode last week.

The court bill opposition hailed today the statement of Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York, condemning the bill as a "greatly dangerous precedent" and as "not in the best interests of the country." The declared it would strengthen the position of Democrats, friendly to the New Deal on other issues, who oppose the court scheme.

Administration spokesmen belittled the effect of the Lehman statement. They quoted Postmaster Farley as saying it would have no effect on Senator Robert F. Wagner, whom Lehman urged to vote against the bill, and it would not cause any senator, pledged to support the bill, to switch to the opposition.

2 MANSFIELDS HEAR CODMAN TESTIMONY

For the most part, he said, the work done was "cheap and poor," and on some of the jobs, work for which the city was billed had not been performed so far as the witness had been able to discover in his personal inspections.

CITES MANY CHARGES

On one job, for scraping and painting of metal in the building at 190-200 Boylston street, the Codman Company billed the city $588.94, the witness declared, although the work done should have cost no more than $250. This bill was dated January 14 of this year.

February 14 of this year a bill for $577.87 was submitted to the city for removing sections of a granite wall in the basement of the same building, removing a brick archway and making whatever repairs were necessary as a result of the removals.

Linenthal said what work had been done could have been done for $310—and there was no evidence of any granite wall having been removed.

At the same address, work was billed for $904.90 and it should have cost no more than $350, according to the witness.

This job included a billed item for removing rust from a fire escape, coating the metal with red lead and then black-painting it. The witness said he scraped the paint and found no red lead had been applied.

SAYS METAL IS RUSTED

Although this work, according to the bill, was performed between last December 11 and January 11, the fire escape is rusted, he said.

Two bills for work allegedly done on the same property, 484 Boylston street, now occupied by the Gilbert Grocery Company as a White Fund tenant, totaled $4283.98 and $4513.05.

The first bill, Linenthal brought out, was never brought to attention of the White Fund trustees, but the second one was the trustees, according to the witness, were given the impression that the second bill was the total cost.

Work performed was alteration of the premises for occupancy as a store by the Gilbert Company.

"REASONABLE GOOD JOB"

The bills, combined, totaled $8,797.03 but the work done, Linenthal declared, should have cost no more than $8,797.00.

"It was a reasonably good job," he said, "but I was unable to find how the Codman Company expended $227 for iron workers and their helpers, because they employed a sub-contractor on this work, the Isaac Blair Company, whose bill was only $75."

For 17 bills submitted to the city, the total was $19,643.02. Linenthal testified, or an overcharge of $410,733.02 by the Codman Company.

Although the nature of Attorney Edmund Mansfield's testimony was kept secret today general feeling of the hearing was that with it the highlight of the probe will be reached.

Tragedy Halts Vacation Trip

Halifax, N. S., July 20—Mrs. Anna Holbrook, Vermont mother whose tour of the Maritime provinces was halted by news of her 6-year-old son's death by drowning, today awaited the takeoff of her brother's plane here for a return trip to her Brattleboro home.

Her husband had sought to locate her for several days to inform her of the tragedy but it was not until yesterday that a resident of Arichat, N. S., recognized the broadcast numbers of her license plates. William Holbrook, the son, was drowned near his home Sunday.

EDITORS URGED TO AID FIGHT ON SHUT SHOP

Detroit, July 20 (AP)—The National Editorial Association, importuned to join in a fight to protect the open shop in news and editorial rooms, studied the invitation today, with its assent indicated.

While the 300 editors at the N. E. A.'s 52nd annual convention considered the proposal preparatory to an expected vote tomorrow, Clayton R. Rand, of Gulfport, Miss., president, resumed his advocacy of the movement.

Rand, warning that the "freedom of the press has been challenged once and will be challenged again," said the "attempt to make editorial rooms closed union shops has been by no means finally blocked."

"If we are to keep the press of the nation free to serve a free people, and none but a free can truly serve any people," Rand said, "we should now face the fact that we can do so only by uniting and aggressively fighting."

The association's enlistment with 12 other similar organizations in combating the American Newspaper Guild's closed shop objective was urged by James G. Stahlman, president of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association.

Stahlman, publisher of the Nashville, Tenn. Banner and head of "The Newspaper Committee" recently named in Chicago by publishers and editors, said a closed news and editorial shop is "incompatible with, and inimical to, a free press."

The N. E. A. adopted a resolution calling for appointment of a committee of five to study the possibilities of a closer relationship with the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

Cameramen IRK Morgan

New York, July 20 (INS)—J. P. Morgan was steaming toward England in his yacht Corsair today, after threatening to turn the ship's hose on photographers who snapped his departure.

Their flash bulbs popping near the financier's estate on Long Island, the pictures men pursued Morgan in a speed boat as he raced from his private pier to the yacht, moored a mile out.

The banker was in jovial mood at first, but no sooner was he aboard the Corsair than he shouted:

"I'll have the hose turned on you fellows if you don't go away!"

Fight for Teacher Due Tomorrow

While Miss Isabelle Hallie, ousted Saugus school teacher, worked as secretary in her father's electrical store today, plans were being made to fight for her reinstatement at tomorrow night's meeting of the school board with a citizens' committee.

At the meeting George McCarrier, school board member who supported the teacher, will present a resolution by the citizens urging her reappointment for the third successive year.

his home and personally viewing the body, after which he expressed his condolences to Marchesa Marconi.

Later the senator's body was removed to the Italian Academy where it will lie in state. An impressive state funeral will be given the inventor Saturday, it was officially announced. Burial will be in the family tomb in Bologna.

International News Service was informed that Marconi first fell ill afternoon and was unable to keep an appointment with Premier Mussolini for 6 p. m.

PHONES DUCE, KING

Apparently he had a premonition that death was approaching, for he later telephoned Il Duce, King-Emperor Victor Emmanuel and Cardinal Pacelli, papal secretary of state, and told them:

"I am afraid I am a very sick man."

From then until the moment he died, Il Duce, the King and Pope Pius kept in constant touch with Marconi's home. At 2:30 a. m. today, it was learned, Pope Pius personally telephoned to the Marconi home for news, then retired to his private chapel to pray for his friend's soul.

Marconi's two physicians, Dr. Frugoni and Dr. Pozzi, were summoned at midnight. Realizing the end was near, they contacted Marchesa Marconi, who was celebrating the daughter's birthday at Via Reggio.

She arrived in Rome at 7 A. M. Sunday and remained at her husband's deathbed.

Also with him when he died were the two physicians and his father-in-law, Count Antonio Bezzi-Scali.

COPELAND HITS PALESTINE TREATY

By ROYAL S. COPELAND

U. S. Senator from New York and a member of the Hearst Newspaper Commission that visited Palestine last year.

Washington, July 20—Last summer the senator from Vermont, Mr. Austin, former Senator Hastings, and I were in Palestine and learned at first hand about conditions there.

Immediately following our visit was the visit of the Royal High Commission, and from that time to this there has been discussion to the effect that, in all probability, there would be a recommendation made for a further partitioning of Palestine.

That has been done, and it is strange, indeed, because those of us who recall the beginning of the World War remember how vigorously the British raised the cry against Germany when Germany marched through Belgium, violating her treaty with Belgium, as was contended by the British.

SCRAP OF PAPER

The slogan was that the Germans had made "a scrap of paper" of the treaty.

If it be true that the British propose a partitioning of Palestine and a further restriction of Jewish immigration into that country, and if that should be done without consultation with the United States. It would be making a "scrap of paper" of the treaty which Great Britain has with us.

During the war, the now famed Balfour declaration was made—a pledge on the part of Lord Balfour for his government that in the event of a successful war the Jews would be given a national home in Palestine.

U. S. INTERESTED

So interested was this government in the Balfour proposal that the Congress of the United States, by unanimous vote, ratified, confirmed and repeated the Balfour declaration.

At the end of the war the supreme war council of the Allies determined upon the disposition of territory won through the war. When it came to the question of Palestine, it was decided that a mandatory should be placed over Palestine and that the terms of the mandate should be prepared by the League of Nations.

In this document will be found a full description and account of the negotiations which led ultimately to the convention between the United States and Great Britain.

When this treaty was finally formulated, it recited in full the identical language of the mandate, as set up by the League of Nations, to be administered by Great Britain as the mandatory. So the treaty which we have with Great Britain includes every word of the mandate.

MAINE PRISON JOB TO WELCH

Augusta, Me., July 20 (AP)—A former Aroostook county sheriff, John H. Welch of Houlton, today was sworn in as the new warden of the Maine State Prison from which, Governor Lewis O. Barrows declared, three prisoners recently were taken swimming by a guard.

The Republican governor and his all Republican council approved Welch's appointment. Welch, also a Republican, was named by Commissioner of Health and Welfare Leadbetter to succeed Edward P. Johnson, Saco Democrat, who resigned last week by request.

Leadbetter administered the oath and Welch said he was ready to assume his duties immediately.

Senate 'Freshmen' Eulogize Norris

Washington, July 20 (INS)—Thirteen "freshmen" members of the Senate today paid unique tribute to Senator George W. Norris, veteran Nebraska Independent, who was forced by illness to leave Washington several weeks ago and retire to his summer place in Wisconsin.

They signed a joint letter to the 76-year-old senator, extolling his liberal record, and pledging themselves to continue his fight for progressive policies.

Half-Nelsons Strangle Love

Washington, July 20 (INS)—Mrs. Kathleen Bell filed suit today for a limited divorce from Harry T. Bell, a government worker.

She claimed Bell is an amateur wrestler, and the "hunny-bugs" he gave her privy to their marriage a year ago developed into hammer-locks and half-nelsons.

Mrs. Bell told the court her husband practiced his holds on her, to her "great pain and suffering."

Partition Plan For Palestine Called Tragedy

Congress, deputy grand master of Massachusetts, Independent Order Brith Abraham and associate commissioner of the state department of mental diseases.

"SOLEMN DUTY"

After reading the article by David Lloyd George, Kalesky commented:

"David Lloyd George's statement to the Hearst newspapers gives notice to the world that no nation is so mighty, no country so powerful that it can renounce its solemn duty, voluntarily assumed yet hopelessly administered, without having an outraged public opinion demand that justice shall prevail among nations as among men.

"When that day comes then shall all the world be at peace and all the people thereof."

Kalesky, discussing the Palestine report, stated:

"Twenty years ago Lord Balfour gave to the Jews and the world what was then thought one of the most sacred documents in the history of world civilization, the Balfour Declaration' as follows:

"'His Majesty's government views with favor the establishment in Palestine of a National Home for the Jewish People, and, will use their best endeavors to facilitate the achievement of this object, it being clearly understood that nothing shall be done which may prejudice the civil and religious rights of existing non-Jewish communities in Palestine, or the rights and political status enjoyed by Jews in any other country.

"To the fulfillment of this trust the Mandate given to Great Britain by the League of Nations for the fulfillment of this declaration to the Jewish people and the acceptance of that trust by Great Britain, now after 18 years, resolves itself into a confirmation of weakness and an admission of incompetency and is a means of destroying the very vitals of civilization so essential in these trying days of persecution to the Jews in Nazi Germany, Poland and other European countries.

"Another tragedy has been

added in the long line of inhuman and cowardly conduct where a suffering, afflicted and helpless people, crying out to the world, has had answer to those cries with further, more cruel and undeserved treatment.

"During the last 20 years thousands upon thousands of Jews have journeyed to Palestine as pioneers in reclaiming what has been for centuries a barren and unproductive country.

"By honest effort, with skill and with a determination to cultivate the soil so that out of a non-productive country fertile fields should give forth their crops, by the establishment of sanitary conditions, buildings of homes, hospitals, schools, and factories, from barbarism and bareness the golden sun of hope and accomplishment has arisen.

"With the expectation that Great Britain would perform to the strictest letter its promises under the Mandate, the Jews of the world looked forward with hope that the future would make for that land a real 'Home, Sweet Home.'

CALLED "ILLUMINATING"

"And now comes despair, misery, and nothing but a bleak and black future to an already too much disheartened people! The great Kingdom of Great Britain admits its failure! What hope is there for civilization?

"Only in the standing together as they have through all the centuries can the Jew look forward and march onward, still with the hope beyond hope, somewhere, somehow the nations of the world will redeem themselves, and that the Jew, as a member of the human family, may have the opportunity to live free and undisturbed, as should be the lot of all mankind."

Louis G. Stone, Federal street attorney and prominent in local Jewish affairs, declared:

"If any Jew has failed to read the article by David Lloyd George in last Sunday's Advertiser, I sincerely advise him or her to obtain a copy and read it. It is one of the most illuminating articles yet to appear on Great Britain's plan to divide Palestine.

"The Almighty will reward for a kind thought if circumstances make it impossible to translate the thought into action, while a contemplated wrong, unaccompanied by action, will not be counted. So say the rabbis of old.

"Accordingly, England is due for reward from the Creator for its good intentions towards the Children of Israel. No one, in my opinion, should doubt Great Britain's sincerity in its attempt to solve the almost insoluble Palestinian question. I am sure that Jewry at large appreciates that fact.

LAUDS HEARST PAPERS

"By the same token, the Jewish people are grateful to Mr. William Randolph Hearst and to the Hearst publications for the sensational commission which went to Palestine at the instance of Mr. Hearst and for the wide publicity given by the Hearst newspapers to the senators' report.

"It is universally admitted that the Jewish people need and are entitled to a national home, but it appears to me that England, in allocating such home, did not go to the limits that it should and could, even under the present circumstances.

"Why take away from the Jewish people that part of Jerusalem which they have only recently developed?

"What reason is there for depriving the Jewish people from developing the Negeb up to the Bay of Akba, which is now nothing but waste land? The Arabs apparently do not need it, for no effort of any kind was ever made by them to reclaim it; whereas the Jewish people, by their ideology and with their resourcefulness, could develop it into a Jewish settlement for almost a million Polish or other Jews whose eyes are turned toward the East."

Mrs. King's Diary Due For Court Reading Today

Rebuffed by her counsel and unsuccessful in her plea for a private hearing, Mrs. Clara M. King, of Newburyport, today in Salem court faced revelation of her personal diary, containing notes on her dealings with the late Hiram Landford, former Newburyport mayor, who died last year at the age of 90.

Mrs. King is fighting a bill of equity brought by the administrators of Landford's $100,000 estate to prevent her from bringing further suits against the estate. She has already filed six such suits.

Attorney Ralph Marks, her counsel, walked out of the case yesterday because of Mrs. King's courtroom etiquette." She engaged in a scuffle with counsel for the administrators last Friday when he sought to introduce the diary as evidence.

Master James Farley ruled that the diary could be introduced in open court and ordered it produced today.

U. S. Begins Plans For 2 Battleships

New York, July 20 (AP)—Five hundred draftsmen today began the 14-month task of designing plans for the first battleship to be built by the United States since 1923.

Plans alone for the 35,000-ton battleship, the North Carolina and the Washington, will cost $3,000,000. The ships will cost approximately $60,000,000 each.

Outlaw Defies Whole Town

Verden, Okla., July 20 (AP) — Roy "Pete" Traxler, fugitive Oklahoma outlaw, and two men who fled with him from a Texas prison farm, drove boldly into Verden at dawn today, picked up Traxler's wife and fled in her car, while officers and acquaintances looked helplessly on.

300 PAY HONOR TO ZIONIST LEADER

Stone, Honored Here, Pleads for United Jewry

The British government, by its plan to partition Palestine, is giving the Arabs a premium for arson and murder, Elihu Stone, vice-president of the Zionist organization of America, told more than 300 Jews from all part of New England at a bon voyage dinner in his honor at the Chamber of Commerce last night.

Stone leaves for Zurich, Switzerland, tomorrow as a delegate to the World Zionist Congress.

He said in part:

"It is symbolic that the struggle for the establishment of the National Jewish title is and to Palestine takes place during the year when we celebrate the fortieth anniversary of the Zionist movement.

FACE GREAT TEST

"The Jewish people are faced with the greatest test of nationhood since the days of the dispersion. The situation as created by the report of the royal commission calls for not only heroic action, but also for a restraint no less elegant.

"We must give concrete evidence of national discipline. All parties in Jewish life must sink their differences and present a united Jewish front throughout the world. Both extremism and hysteria must be eliminated.

"Of course, we must protest against the report of the royal commission. A grave injustice is being done to us. Palestine is being mutilated without regard for historic integrity. The contemplated Jewish State is grossly inadequate.

"It seems as if Great Britain is giving the Arabs a premium for arson and murder.

OTHER SPEAKERS

"I am certain that the enlightened public opinion of the world, and particularly of Great Britain, will cause His Majesty's government to see the error of its ways, and will make it possible for the Jewish people to be in Palestine as in the Land of Promise, and not in the Land of the Broken Promise."

Other speakers at the dinner included Judge Jacob J. Kaplan, Alexander Brin, Executive Councilor Joseph H. Grossman, Rabbi Herman H. Rubenovitz of Mishkan Tefila Temple, Roxbury; Judge Jennie Loitman Barron, and Eldar Markson.

Sorry, Men; Your Place Is Home

Women Hear Mates Should Keep House

Atlantic City, N. J., July 20 (AP)—That woman's place is in the home idea is just a gag men have been putting over all this time.

Dr. Robert Hoppock, assistant director of the National Occupational Conference and the National Federation of Business and Professional Women today that hubbies probably won't get away with it much longer.

Now, he said, a definite shortage of competent women has begun to show up in the work-a-day world and soon the girls will be flying the coop.

"Marriage no longer means permanent removal from the employment market," he said. There is no sound psychological reason why women should cook meals, wash dishes, launder clothes and clean houses.

Long established tradition and the deep-seated desire of men to perpetuate their own special privileges is about the only thing that keeps women in the home, said Dr. Hoppock.

Housework belongs more logically to men, he said, since it frequently involves physical strain which men are better able to endure.

Mrs. Grace Loucks Elliot, a writer on psychological subjects, likewise knocked the idea that married women shouldn't find jobs outside the home.

Women Over 40 Told How to Make Own Living

Atlantic City, N. J., July 20 (AP) — Miss Frances Maule, noted authority on women's occupational problems, gave the following advice before the National Federation of Business and Professional Women today to women over 40 who are suddenly thrown on their own resources:

1—Seek to establish yourself in a business of your own instead of hunting a job which you may never land.

2—Capitalize on your existing skills rather than spend time and money acquiring new ones.

3—Steer away from the more crowded competitive fields.

4—Concentrate your efforts on the so-called women's fields—food, shelter, clothing, child care, etc.

6—Face your situation realistically; accept the business world on its own terms.

Belgrade Guarded In Church Crisis

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, July 20 (AP)—Gendarmes patrolled Belgrade today in fear of further flareups in the tense situation marking the Serbian Orthodox Church's opposition to a concordat with the government and Roman Catholicism.

The elderly Orthodox Bishop Simeon of Sabatz, and Wojn Janich, former government leader in Parliament, were knocked down when police and parades clashed yesterday near the Belgrade cathedral.

British Deny "Mutiny"

London, July 20 (INS)—Persistent reports of a mutiny aboard the battleship Warspite today caused the Admiralty to circulate a note to all newspapers declaring statements the crew balked at duty are entirely without foundation.

AMELIA'S AIDE ASKS NEW HUNT

New York, July 20 (INS)—A plea for continuation of the search for Amelia Earhart and Frederick J. Noonan was made today by Captain Harry Manning, who served as navigator to the famous aviatrix during her unsuccessful attempt to encircle the globe last March.

Suggesting that at least one cutter be left behind in the vicinity of Howland Island to patrol the area, Manning pointed out that a plane rescued in 1932 had remained afloat 20 days, adding:

"There is still hope in my mind. At least, the cutter might find wreckage, and the minds of those who will forever wonder will be set at rest."

Los Angeles, July 20 (AP)—Mikhail Gromoff, pilot on the second Russian transpolar flight, praised Amelia Earhart in a statement today.

"Miss Earhart," the pilot said, "can serve as a model to the aviatrixes of the whole world. Her loss is one which will not be filled soon, even in such a country as America."

FLAMES SWEEP SAWDUST PLANT

Haverhill, July 20—Second large fire within two days, a general alarm blaze swept through the Merrimack Sawdust Company early today, causing damage estimated at $2000.

Firemen spent five hours pulling over and extinguishing sparks in the sawdust and waste on the floors of the plant, located at 13 Hale street, in the heart of Haverhill's industrial district.

Workmen attempted to put out the rapidly spreading fire with hand pails after it had started from a spark from a machine belt shortly after midnight.

Three automatic sprinklers went off as the neat grew more intense, sending in a fire alarm at headquarters.

Fire Chief Rufus A. Crittenden rang in the general alarm after seeing the headway the fire was making, with many industrial plants threatened in the district.

Inquest Ordered in Hollywood Death

Hollywood, July 20 (INS)—Despite official announcement that natural causes were responsible for the death of Dorothy May Garland, Hollywood woman detective, Coroner Frank Nance today ordered an inquest.

In his official report, Coroner Nance ascribed death to acute alcoholism, but added that "a contributory cause may have been bruises which covered her body."

24 MORE SPIES EXECUTED BY SOVIETS

Moscow, July 20 (AP)—Execution of 24 more alleged "Trotskyist and Japanese terrorists spies and wreckers" was reported from the Soviet Far East today.

The Khabarovsk, Siberia, court which sentenced them to death accused them of sabotage along the Trans-Siberian Railroad.

The executions raised the total of persons reported executed in Soviet Russia's spy hunt in recent months to 322, most of them in the Far East.)

Pravda, Communist party newspaper, charged delay in harvesting the Soviet's bumper wheat crop. The charge was linked with new shake-ups in high offices.

Edward F. Rosenthal, vice-commissar of water transportation, was removed from office for an undisclosed reason and succeeded by George Kucherooff. Turxun Khod-jaieff, commissar of domestic trade in the Uzbek Republic, was succeeded by Ak'akrdjan Akhmedoff, former Uzbek commissar for grain and cattle breeding on state farms.

$3500 to Cambridge Youth

The Harvard Graduate School of Design today announced awards of $12,500 to 18 students. The major cash award, the Arthur W. Wheelwright Traveling Fellowship in Architecture, of $3500, went to a Cambridge youth, Constantin A. Tertzieff.

Vets Aim to Have Neglected Stones Erected on Graves

Greater Boston veteran organizations today started action so that hundreds of government headstones, scattered around various cemeteries waiting to be erected on graves of World War comrades, will be immediately set up in their proper places.

The action of the veteran groups was the result of complaints to government officials by Edward J. McCormack, president of the 101st Infantry Veterans Association, and brother of Congressman John W. McCormick. McCormack charged headstones were not being erected in certain cemeteries because of regulations and lack of interest.

In one Greater Boston cemetery alone McCormack charged that more than 100 veterans' headstones have not even been uncrated.

Edward J. Walsh, past state commander of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War, upon learning of the situation, announced he would bring the matter before the next executive meeting of the state department.

A plan whereby aid would be given relatives who are financially unable to pay the charges of erecting the stones will be discussed, Walsh said.

Baby Stolen

Fashion Show at Magnolia Aids North Shore Babies Hospital

By BETTY ALDEN

MOST MEN are a little bit scornful of fashion shows and often poke fun at their wives and sweethearts for spending the best part of an afternoon at a tea table, coveting each garment displayed by the mannequins . . .

Women always make the defense that masculinity . . . and the modern scene in general . . . gain, because at the shows they see the gowns on living models and can select the ones which are most becoming to their own style of beauty . . .

MRS. BENJAMIN GOODALE

But there is one, heretofore unmentioned, by-product of the fashion shows . . . which results in a decided gain for the more rugged sex and at the same time tends to compensate a practice which has long been advertised as one of milady's most aggravating faults . . .

Any man who watches a girl who is modelling in a fashion show, walk slowly off the runway, then suddenly dash for the dressing room and emerge less than a minute later in a complete new outfit, from slippers to hat, can't help but wonder if she is the same lithesome damsel who keeps him twiddling his thumbs or talking with mother in the parlor for nearly an hour . . . while she goes through the lengthy ordeal of putting the finishing touches on costume and makeup before going out on a date . . .

Several men watched the models going in and out at the North Shore Babies Hospital fashion show yesterday afternoon at the Casino in Magnolia, with wide-eyed wonder . . . There were not quite enough debs and post debs to keep the show running along smoothly, so each girl had to sprint up the stairs to the dressing room and emulate a lightning-change artist, in order to be down again and ready to go on without holding up the procession . . .

Even the most skeptical males agreed that this practice in speedy changing can only result in greater proficiency and better working conditions for patient escorts who must sit down, but cannot strike . . .

Nancy Cochrane Models Many Frocks

JUDGED ON THIS BASIS Nancy Cochrane should be the most popular girl on the shore . . . for yesterday she outstripped her fellow models in her ability to scoot upstairs and be down again in a jiffy, putting the finishing touches on an entirely different outfit, as she came . . . It seemed that every third or fourth girl on the runway was this vivacious daughter of Mrs. Dudley Pickman, Jr., who, said to relate, is going to be in Europe for the rest of the summer, and will be greatly missed at all the social doings along the shore . . .

Nancy's first appearance on the runway was in a very feminine and charming tennis outfit of white sharkskin . . . with which she wore her own white angora socks with her autograph embroidered on the cuffs in pale green . . . and her final appearance was in a very individual reddish Paisley evening gown with a wide swirling sash of bright green and red chiffon . . .

Among the many, many people who attended the affair, which, incidentally, is the second in a series of four Monday afternoon lectures and fashion shows for the hospital, were Mrs. Sewell Fessenden with Mrs. Edward Bigelow and the latter's debutante daughter, Olivia Ames: Mrs. Nathaniel Simkins, Jr., Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Mrs. Allan Forbes, whose novel little hat was made of a narrow white straw brim and a couple of flowered chiffon handkerchiefs wound around the crown; Mrs. Joseph B. Hoyt, Jr., Mrs. Benjamin P. Moseley, Mrs. Russell Burrage, Mrs. George E. Warren, Mrs. Charles Scott, Miss Helen Burnham with Mrs. John L. Curtis, Mrs. A. Wildar Pollard with Mrs. Ernest Gale, Mrs. John Paulding Meade and Mrs. William B. Olmstead . . .

The girls who modelled were Elizabeth Dewart and her sister, Mrs. Benjamin Goodale, of Manchester, Catherine and Cornelia Pentecost, Ellen Moseley, Eleanor Swift, Joanna Hoyt, Dorothy Potter, Phyllis Forbes, Dorothy and Patricia Preston and Barbara Stevens . . . Still others in the audience were Marion Lawrence with Mrs. T. Dennie Boardman, Jr., and Peggy Seyburn, Martha Proctor, Sister Frothingham, Miss Mary Curtis with Mrs. Samuel Tucker and Mrs. Frederick Sprague Goodwin, Mrs. Augustus Rantoul and Mrs. Robert Brookings . . .

Trivia and Oddment

MRS. JAMES AMORY SULLIVAN came up from Prides' Crossing yesterday for a bit of shopping, and after her morning's expedition dropped in at the Somerset Club to meet her hubby . . . yellow and brown polka dots fashioned her jacket ensemble, with a brown hat trimmed with yellow and brown accessories . . . We turned to the wrong list in our mental cataloguing of socialites Saturday evening and confused Ruth and Eileen Williams . . . it was Ruth who danced so smoothly with Dick Sprague at the Casino . . . Bobby Burnett is making the most of his vacation from Harvard where he will be a junior in the fall, by taking a summer trip to Germany . . . Bobby is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Hall Burnett of Deerfoot, Southboro, and brother of Madge, who spends a great deal of vacation time at Cohasset where she has loads of friends . . .

Eavie Lilly will make her bow to Boston society November 10 at a dance at the Ritz . . . She is the daughter of Mrs. Frederick Clay Barnett of Beverly Cove . . . Celina Robbins, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William Robbins of Boston and Ipswich, has deserted the North Shore in favor of Europe . . . she sailed about a week ago, shortly after taking part as a bridesmaid in Elise Russell Cutler's wedding . . . Mrs. T. Dennie Boardman (Vivian Dixon) achieves striking color combinations even in her most simple daytime clothes . . . yesterday afternoon at the North Shore Babies Hospital fashion show and tea she wore an apple green flannel sport dress with a tangerine cardigan and a little bow of tangerine patent leather holding her blonde curls in place . . . Susie Seyburn, her companion, wore a modish linen frock of Dubonnet.

She Wants to Marry Secretly Against Parents' Advice

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

The old saying "love will find a way" does not apply in every case.

Here is a young girl whose parents do not want her to wed at the present time. Yet in her letter she is entertaining the idea of an elopement.

Secret marriages are not often successful and this girl should think twice before going against the wishes of those who are dear to her. Here is her letter:

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My parents like him a lot, but they do not want me to marry him yet. It will take three years more for me to graduate in the profession they have set their hearts on my following. But we (the boy and I) feel that during that time we may drift apart.

Do you think a secret marriage would be a solution.

I have no intention of practicing the profession my parents insisted upon my entering. The only reason I am taking up this work is that I may be able to take care of myself should the emergency arise. J. AND L.

It's a question in my mind whether a profession entered into so half-heartedly would enable you to take care of yourself—in case of an emergency. If I were your mother I should let you marry now instead of spending time and money for the next three years on something in which you have no real interest.

Why not be frank with your parents and tell them how you feel about giving up that amount of time to this professional work." See if they will not agree to your being married open and above board.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

We've known each other for three years and I have taken her out occasionally. Still I think she could care a little more about me than she does. She goes out with another fellow when, I gather, she likes. I lack the nerve to tell her how much I care, though she has told me I could take her out any time I please.

Her mother approves of me, too. The other man is quite serious about her, but she doesn't seem to go "ready" yet. When I'm about ready to drop out, sometimes she gives me a little bit of hope. It would help tremendously if I were only sure of her. DOWNCAST.

DEAR DOWNCAST:

Pluck up your courage and put a little more ardor into this affair. It seems to me that you have had plenty of encouragement, and the only stumbling block is your faint-hearted attitude. Make the girl see you're in earnest, instead of sitting around downcast, waiting for her to throw you a crumb or two of hope.

Bridge

Finding the Loophole

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

If all declarers were thoroughly conversant with safety plays, we would hear much less about brilliant defensive coups.

Most of these latter spring from the fact that declarer laid himself open.

The opening may be only a tiny one but that is enough for the defender who follows the play with every faculty alert, as did East in today's hand.

North, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	6 ◇	Pass
Pass	Pass

West led the spade King; declarer won, and entered dummy with the club Ace. The heart Ace was cashed, declarer discarding a spade, and a low club was led from dummy. East won, and returned a spade which declarer ruffed.

At this point, since declarer had lost only one trick and since the club suit was either already established or within one trick of establishment, the laying down of the trump Ace followed by the ruff of a low club with dummy's diamond Queen would have left the defenders helpless.

True, if West had started out with the King-ten and another trump this line of play would fail, since West would eventually win two trump tricks, but there would be no help for this. Certainly declarer could not cash the diamond Ace and then take the risk of ruffing a club with dummy's remaining low trump. Nor could he risk leading two rounds of trumps, because either defender might win the second round and take out dummy's remaining trump, making a club ruff impossible.

As actually played, declarer did not cash the diamond Ace. After ruffing East's spade return he led a low club and ruffed with the diamond Queen. He figured that if this were overruffed he would almost certainly drop the outstanding trumps with the Ace and Jack, in which he was correct. But East, who had had no difficulty in counting declarer for six diamonds, five clubs and two spades, saw that to overruff the diamond Queen would be limiting himself to one trick.

Without the slightest hesitation, therefore, East discarded a heart, thus creating in declarer's mind the impression that he could not overruff the Queen. With that impression in mind declarer's next play seemed marked. He led a diamond from the dummy and went right up with the Ace.

From declarer's point of view the finesse was unthinkable. West would win the thought) and return a club for East to ruff. Very confidently declarer followed up the diamond Ace with another diamond, and met a decided shock when East, with a snicket, gobbled up the King and ten.

CHAPTER XXIII

"But—but, hang it all, Miss Morrison, what am I? A child or a prisoner, or what? I tell you I will be right back."

"If you must have a soda mint, send one of these beach attendants for some," Margery urged.

"But look here, suppose Susie gets through with the hair dresser and is looking for me? No use to try and bluff you, Miss Morrison, so I'll admit that I can't work any more today."

"You may rest assured, Mr. Matthews, that Susie will not show up yet awhile—"

A bellboy, recognizing Freddy, came up and said:

"Are you Miss Morrison?"

Margery said that she was.

"You are wanted on the telephone, Miss Morrison."

Margery became suspicious. Perhaps, she thought, Freddy had arranged this. Then she realized that he had not had the opportunity.

She did not want to lose sight of him, however, and said to the boy:

"Tell the party calling that I am extremely busy and to call me back in a couple of hours."

"Now look here, Miss Morrison," Freddy exclaimed with eager firmness, "it may be something important. I won't allow my work to interfere with your personal affairs. After all, you are not a slave, you know."

"But if I leave now, we will never finish this," Margery objected.

"Yes we will. I'll go right up and stand beside you at the telephone booth and wait."

MAKES GETAWAY

Apparently Freddy intended to keep his word. At the hotel he stood just outside the booth as Margery went in and answered the call. It was from Abbey Belden.

"Miss Morrison," she boomed, "how is that lazy baboon coming along? Of course you found him?"

"Yes, Miss Belden, I found him and she work seems to be coming along all right, although he is chafing over the way I am forcing him—"

"Let him chafe his head off, and get those last two chapters o[ver] his system."

"Miss Belden. He has already outlined both chapters."

"Good enough. Stick right to him. I'll be down tomorrow and I must have the finished novel when I get there."

"I promise you to stick to him and to have the last word written when you get down here tomorrow," Margery assured her.

She stepped out of the telephone booth, feeling that when she reported this to Freddy, he would snap out of it and settle down to work, but there was no Freddy in sight. He had sneaked away!

Margery couldn't be downright angry. There was something about Freddy, about her feelings toward him, that would not permit this, but she was thoroughly dejected and a feeling of hopeless defeat took possession of her. However, there was that in Margery Morrison's make-up that would not stand long for defeat. She began to use her clever head, to try and devise some means of still forcing Freddy Matthews to finish his novel on time.

STARTS SEARCH

Margery looked in the lounge, the cocktail bar, the men's grill, she searched the foyer, writing room, and verandas and grounds and down at the beach, but not a glimpse of Freddy did she get.

It did not occur to her that Freddy would go to the beauty parlor in hopes of getting "Susie" rush through with her beauty treatment. But there is where he went, only he saw no "Susie," naturally. But what was worse, he was assured that no blonde young lady had been in the parlor all day.

What was more, a guest at the hotel, they told Freddy, certainly would not go elsewhere for hair dressing, since everyone knew that the parlor at this hotel was by far the most popular.

Freddy took a walk, trying to figure out where Susie could have really gone and why she should have made up this story about going to get her hair curled. Come to think of it, her hair seemed to be in perfect condition.

Margery finally gave up her search for Freddy, this was after she had telephoned his room and learned that he was not there.

By now her dejection had turned rather to determination. Something must be done. She went up to her room—the room she had taken under her own name. The clerk had obeyed orders. There was a typewriter and a ream of paper there.

Margery sat down and looked over that very bare skeleton of an outline Freddy had dictated to her. It was nothing at all, when she analyzed it. And then she decided on a seemingly daring plan. She locked her room door, took off her wig and the bothersome fake spectacles, tossed the notes that Freddy had dictated to her into a waste basket and arranged the typewriter to her satisfaction.

She intended to write those last two chapters of Freddy Matthew's novel herself!

SUMS UP STORY

Margery figured that possibly Miss Belden would not know the difference. As for Freddy, he would willingly agree never to tell Miss Belden the truth.

Freddy hadn't been far from right when he told Margery that she seemed to know the novel better than he did. She summed up mentally the entire story up to where Freddy had stopped, arrayed the situations in mind, and started out on "Chapter XXX."

The opening paragraphs of this chapter became a struggle. Half a dozen times she yanked out what she had written and started again. Finally she was satisfied with the manner in which she opened this chapter.

Margery worked steadily, painstakingly, and slowly. At times she had qualms about it. After all, she was a trained secretary and stenographer, not a fiction writer. But she was blessed with a sensible confidence in herself, and knew that there had been many passages in what Freddy had dictated that she would have written otherwise.

After all, this was an emergency, it would save Freddy from losing $15,000 and facing a serious lawsuit.

Freddy Matthews got tired of walking about and came back to the hotel. He looked in at the beauty parlor, but no blonde girl had been there. He peered into the lobby to make sure that Miss Morrison wasn't lurking around to grab him, and went up to his room. He called "Miss Rogers" room, but got no reply. He learned the number and went to the room and knocked, thinking that perhaps "Susie" had gone up to take a nap, but there was no response.

WHEN you walk do you kick the inner ankle bone with the other leg? They call that interference, we believe. It certainly interferes with comfort. Get shoes with lighter heels. Over the ankle bone place a square of gauze, and keep it in place with adhesive tape. Low heels are less likely to be "kickers" than high ones.

Back-to-School Knits

WE HATE to even mention the words "back to school," but inevitably as the waves roll in to crash against the shore, September is coming, and so is school. She'll feel actually excited about going back if she has one of these handsome knits to wear—the teenster. Both of these models have all the smartly casual touches of classic sports clothes. And they're so easy to knit. The flared skirt on the left (a) and longer jacket buttoned down the front is good. Very sportsy is the other (b) with cardigan buttoning repeated on the skirt. You may have direction for either suit if you write to Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and stating your preference.

MADGE REVEALS FATHER'S SECRETS

CHAPTER 358

MRS. Ticer's voice sank to a whisper as she repeated the fiendish threat against my father which she had overheard while she was gathering greens near the shack on the deserted farm back of ours.

For the space of several seconds I could not speak myself, because of the last words she had quoted, "I'll bet we get him this time, especially if we can find out for certain that he isn't in that farmhouse. He's too well guarded there."

"Tell me the rest quickly. I must talk to Mr. Graham and see what is to be done."

"There ain't much more to tell," she said, "but one thing you ought to know. The one with the field glasses that seemed to be the leader, he made his brags that he'd paid big rent for the shack to Lawyer Billings, who looks after all that property, and that Billings would swear they were respectable citizens camping up there for their health. And when the other one asked if anybody would find out who they really were, the leader said:

SLEEPLESS NIGHTS

"'Who would ever come up here? It isn't berry season yet, and there's nothing else to bring them. They're too busy. But if anybody does come snooping around, it will be just too bad. There are lots of good places for graves up here, and we'd be far away before anybody was missed. I believe in the old saying, "Dead men tell no tales."'

"You can believe that sent a shiver down my spine," Mrs. Ticer said. "I didn't dare more, and I was afraid I might cough or sneeze. I was nearly wild. But after the leader had cursed about having to stick around there, saying he couldn't go away until he'd found out for certain your father wasn't in the farmhouse, the other one said it was time for chow, and they went back into the shack, and I could smell things cooking.

"How I ever did it without fainting away, I don't know," she went on, "but I crawled away from there on my hands and knees, dragging my trowel and my pan with me.

"I keep looking over my shoulder every second to see if they came out of the shack, but they didn't, and I'm sure they didn't dream I'd ever been around. But you can bet I've kept the doors and windows locked since, and stayed awake most of the nights.

"And I've been trying to find out ever since if your father was in the farmhouse. I gitsy you know I never would have bothered him for anything but a matter of life or death like this, but I sent him a message by that nurse, asking to see him, and I know if he'd been there, he'd have sent for me."

MADGE CONFESSES

I leaned forward and put my hands over her shaking ones.

"Dear, good friend," I said, "you don't know how grateful I am to you. And if my father's life can be saved during this dangerous and secret mission of his, you may be sure that you have helped materially to save it. I will tell you now what no one knows outside the farm household. My father is not at home, and we are pretending that he is ill, hoping that the men conspiring against him will believe that he is there."

"And now they don't believe it," she said despondently.

"But they will in a day or two," I said, and she looked up quickly.

"How's that?" she asked.

"I'm telling you something now that you must forget you have heard," I said solemnly, and she returned my gaze earnestly.

"I'd do before I'd tell it," she said, and I nodded, for I knew she was speaking only the truth.

"My father's twin brother is coming secretly here in a day or two. He looks exactly like my father, and will dress like him, and when I take him out in the car I imagine you wouldn't know the difference."

"I'll bet I would," she said confidently, and I nodded, for I had the greatest respect for her shrewdness. "But," she added consolingly, "taint likely anybody else could tell the difference, especially men who don't know him so well. But are you going to let those fellows stay up there?"

DIRECTIONS For Perfect CLAMBAKE

By MARTHA LEE

SEASIDE — July—green corn—what does it spell? Why, anyone can guess — CLAMBAKE! We are wondering if that article that caught our attention in the paper last Friday prompted this person to inquire about how to make a clambake.

"First Shipment of Corn on Cob Reaches Hub" was the caption bearing the news of corn on the cob. And right on the heels of this announcement came the request.

Experience has taught us that most people proficient in this particular branch of culinary art have certain definite ideas as to the correct procedure. So in order to avoid becoming embroiled in any heated discussion of the question, we are quoting no less an authority than Ganeel's Culinary Encyclopedia.

CLAM-BAKE

"Dig a hole in the ground, cover the bottom with flat stones, in the form of a well two or three feet long; make a large fire, enough to make the stones red. When there is nothing left but the ashes make a bed of seaweeds.

"Put in small packages (according to the number of guests) the clams, a small lobster, one-half chicken, fresh corn, a crab, some sweet potatoes and a sea bass, tie the cloth tight. Put all of the packages in hole and cover with sea weed.

"Cover again with a piece of strong canvas, and recover with sand. The heat of the stones and the steam cook it thoroughly. After a couple of hours take off the sand very carefully and serve. One does not need any culinary capacity for this primitive style of cooking."

BUILD THE FIRE

A bake cannot be properly made for less than 25 persons and should have from 25 to 50. Its ingredients are clams, corn, sweet and white potatoes, chicken and lobsters. A hole should be dug in the ground, graded to the size of the bake that it is intended be make.

This hole should be lined with good field stones put closely together, on top of them should be built a wood fire which should burn at least 10 or 12 hours, in order to properly heat the stones.

When the stones are heated they should be covered three inches deep with seaweed. On top of this seaweed should be put the clams with the sweet and white potatoes. Then about two inches of seaweed and the chicken cut in pieces and wrapped in cheese cloth, another two inches of seaweed and the lobster, another two inches of seaweed and topped off with the corn which must not be shucked.

The whole is then covered with seaweed four or five inches deep and a heavy sail cloth placed over the pit and weighted down. By this method, it takes from 30 minutes to 1 hour.

Perhaps you're not interested but there is a full moon on Friday, the 23rd.

Models Walk Gracefully Into Screen Roles

By IDA JEAN KAIN

IT looks as if the New York models are going to make good in Hollywood. Of the fourteen girls imported to model fashions in "Vogues of 1938," more than half will remain in pictures.

Not one of these girls is an actress but they are heading toward success in the films because of perfect posture, a graceful walk and model measurements.

Beauty, you see, is a composite picture in which these three items are all-important. The first thing a model learns is to walk and stand beautifully. Even Omar Kiam's touch of genius would be lost on the wardrobe of an actress who does not know the value of an erect, graceful carriage, and the loveliest figure may be obscured by poor posture.

To acquire this graceful stride, the model or actress practices walking for hours at a time, balancing a book precariously on her lovely head. This training continues until she learns to move without jerkiness. If you want to learn to walk gracefully and to wear clothes divinely, study the cast in this fashion film, which will be released in August in New York, Paris and Hollywood simultaneously.

The cast is headed by two beautiful ex-models. Both Joan Bennett, the lovely heroine, and Helen Vinson, the fascination siren, began their careers as models. They have a distinct flair for clothes. In fact, Miss Vinson has been voted one of Hollywood's best-dressed women. Incidentally, the picture presents a style forecast in technicolor.

If you think perfect measurements are an accident, you are an optimist. Not only do these girls get plenty of outdoor activity, of which walking is their favorite, but they concentrate on exercise for the figure-controlling muscles. Since a well-developed chest and a firm bust are essential to the model figure, they have evolved several new exercises for these measurements. Here is a favorite:

MOVEMENT: Holding this position, raise the elbows to shoulder level. Now, push against the arms with the hands in quick, simultaneous jerks. This exercise tones the pectoral muscles and fills out the chest and lifts the bust to normal position.

Seek Expert Advice

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

EXCEPT in the simplest of ailments, my face is set against self-medication. It is one of the most common and dangerous of all the practises resorted to by the layman.

The attacks of what he calls "indigestion" may yield temporarily to the use of bicarbonate of soda or some other palliative measure. Unfortunately, in many cases, such attacks of heartburn or gas formation may be signs of some serious damage to the heart. Even though the victim is aware of his true condition, there is a dread of consulting the doctor for fear he will be told he must cut down on his work.

DISASTER NEAR

There is another type of person, he actually boasts of never having been to a doctor. Such individuals have a "remedy" for whatever ails them. Possibly some of these persons are right. Unfortunately, others are living under the sword of Damocles, and disaster is near at hand.

A dear friend of mine, a doctor, recently wrote me about the medical records that show an alarming increase in "degenerative" diseases among persons beyond the age of 30. He urged me to stress this danger.

There is no doubt that this marked increase in such ailments is due to the neglect of personal hygiene and everyday care of the health. All physicians realize that in early diagnosis and treatment lie safety.

Recently there has been inaugurated a campaign which should be encouraged. It is hoped to encourage the public to make better use of medical knowledge. All are advised to consult the doctor in advance of trouble and in this way avoid the many pitfalls of self-diagnosis and self-medication.

Rail News Lacking in Cheer

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

There is little cheer for the railroads in the financial news headlines these days. If it is not the complexities of wage negotiations it is some other development of a depressing nature. Right now the report of the National Resources Committee to President Roosevelt and June operating reports are the millstones the industry must carry.

The National Resources Committee has told the President that there are four principal reasons why freight traffic cannot be expected to expand during the next 20 to 25 years materially beyond the levels that existed prior to 1930. In the order of importance these reasons are the trend towards a stabilized population; relocation and dispersion of industry to get closer to raw materials; advanced technology, including the use of farmers' isolated markets; and the development of the electric power industry. Obviously if the traffic that rates could be to be permanently restricted then ultimate expansion of railroad income must depend on internal developments. And while the possibilities are many and varied it is hardly any wonder that such a report to the President makes it just about impossible to whip up any enthusiasm for them.

* * *

The trend of American railroad operating results is excellently portrayed by the June report of Southern Pacific. On first glance it is susceptible to a beamish interpretation because net operating income declined 24½ per cent under the figure for June last year despite a jump of 14.3 per cent under the figure for June last year despite a jump of 14.3 per cent in operating revenues. In the first place the decline in net, which amounted to $812,386, is more than covered by an increase in maintenance outlay of $1,816,844, or 71.6 per cent over the figure for the comparable month in 1936. Transportation expenses were also sharply higher. In part the gains here are due to added costs in handling the traffic increases brought by freight and fare reductions. But these gains also made it necessary to utilize less efficient equipment, the net of which absence of the rise in transportation expense of $1,461,371 may be attributed to increased fuel costs.

* * *

Thus when these operating statements are broken down the final result is nowhere near as bearish as one suspected at first glance. And another bit of cheer may be drawn from the fact that railroads seem to have a tighter hold on transportation expenses in recent months than was the case earlier in the year. Southern Pacific for instance handled an increase in gross revenues in June as compared with May of $2,019,770, with an increase in expenses of only $22,841.

* * *

Industrial stock prices, aided firmness in the rail section, have risen from their recent trading shelf and have now new approach stated the upside limits set by most technical observers for the initial leg of a new intermediate advance. That several sessions at least will be spent at or just slightly above current prices seems almost certain. The chances are that the blue chip leaders which have shown the way to date will rest while the secondary issues that have been decidedly backward to date are brought up into line.

* * *

Insofar as this writer is concerned current and nearby market action presents an excellent opportunity to observe the behavior of stocks now held and to profit by getting rid of unsatisfactory situations, thus obtaining cash to buy into better acting stocks on reactions. Stocks that refuse to rally under present favorable conditions are not worth holding. At the same time issues poorly situated from a seasonal viewpoint should be sold and forgotten for the present.

* * *

Notebook: L. A. Young Spring & Wire is expected to top by a small margin the $$3.25 earned in the first half of last year. The second quarter this year is said to have been the best in Sharon Hoop's history. . . . Mead Johnson, on the curb, may earn as much as $11 per share this year as are told. . . . Page Hersey Tube should close close to $$7.50 per share in '37, according to those who follow the company's affairs. . . . The poor Western Union May report is resulting in some forecasts of a deficit being shown in June when rate reductions were effective . . . The stock is definitely out of favor in some quarters . . . None-the-less it could rally further for technical reasons in here, in our opinion.

Dividends

Central Massachusetts Light & Power Co. declared regular quarterly dividends of 50 cents on the common and $1.50 on the 6 per cent preferred stock. The common dividend is payable August 31 to stock of record July 15, and the preferred is payable August 16, record July 31.

STOCKS Again Point HIGHER

PROFIT TAKING APPEARS

New York, July 20—Buying in motors enlivened today's stock market and many issues, in initial dealings, pushed up fractions to 3 points. The rush was comparatively brief, however, and profit selling trimmed extreme advances later. The pace also slowed appreciably.

Chrysler led the upturn, closely followed by General Motors, Yellow Truck, Mack Truck and Motor Products.

Steels inclined to take a back seat although U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet & Tube and Republic edged up slightly.

The majority of the rails were ahead, including Santa Fe, Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific, Northern Pacific, A. T. & S. Central and Baltimore & Ohio.

Among the front were Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Macy, Western Union, Consolidated Edison, Home Bound, American Telephone, U. S. Pipe & Foundry and Texas Corp.

Bonds and commodities generally pointed higher.

Encouraging to recovery forces were reports from merchandising circles indicating July retail trade probably will make a better showing than is customary for this month.

During the past two weeks it was estimated, department stores have scored an average increase of about 8 per cent over the comparable 1936 period.

Helpful also was the statement of the Federal Reserve Board to the effect that, although there has been a sharp increase in commercial loans, especially in inland banks. Thus made without securities collateral gained $62,000,000 and secured loans were up $14,000,000. Loans to brokers and dealers dropped $69,000,000.

The French franc was off .00½ of a cent at 3.75¼ as the first trading beginning of foreign exchange transactions. Sterling was up ⅝ of a cent at $4.98 2-16.

Tokyo Market Opens Nervous

Tokyo, July 20 (AP)—The stock market opened nervously today, influenced by the North China crisis, and stocks dropped one to four yen (the yen is 28 cents).

FORBES LISTS EVENTS

By B. C. FORBES

What matters are most in the minds of readers these days?

Those who send letters to this column comprise mostly two main classes: employers and employes, including quite a number of women.

The principal subjects discussed by those responsible for managing business enterprises are:

CIO activities.

The Supreme Court battle.

Mounting taxes.

The wages-and-hours bill, the so-called "anti-NRA."

Proposed legislation to reorganize the administration of the government along lines centering much greater power in the hands of the Chief Executive.

The Farm Bureau bill.

The "seven little sisters of TVA."

The corporation tax bill.

Gold imports.

The unbalanced budget and the outlook for balancing it (not considered bright).

The European and Far-Eastern war alarms.

The effect of higher wages and material costs on net profits.

The parts played by President Roosevelt, Secretary Perkins, John L. Lewis, Myron C. Taylor, Tom Girdler, the Governors of Ohio, Michigan and Pennsylvania in the labor field.

How much longer Congress will sit.

Also, of course, such essential economic subjects as crop prospects (considered highly promising); the failure of a building boom to materialize; the recent rise in railway operating costs and threatened labor trouble; the paucity of new capital issues; our unsatisfactory international trade reliance; the showing to be made by second-quarter corporation reports; the weekly or monthly statistics covering steel, automobiles, power output, oil production, copper, railway traffic, volume of bank transactions, fluctuations in commodity prices, and—always—security market trends, past, present and prospective.

Turning to the themes more frequently written about by other classes of readers, look at the moment almost monopolizes interest. That John L. Lewis isn't the idol of every worker is emphatically revealed. There seems to be very wide dislike of paying union dues by workers who heretofore have never joined any union. A levy a $12 a year makes a dent in the spending money of many a workman's wife.

Among white-collared workers in the low-salaried brackets the feeling is that during all the moves to improve the income and shorten the hours of labor, they have been almost wholly overlooked—a complaint for which there is solid ground.

One sore spot is the depriving of American workers of jobs because of importations of foreign goods produced by workers receiving only a fraction of the American wage standard.

Many ordinary folks complain bitterly about the cost of building or acquiring a home.

Also the rising cost of living, including rising rents.

Briefly, the employing classes were becoming more hopeful chiefly because of events in Washington and the cessation of talk that the President's insistence on continuing the Supreme Court battle caused a chill. Excellent crop prospects have become an uplifting influence. The recovery in stocks has also played a part.

As for workers, they have for the last two or three years taken a more cheerful view than large employers. They still can double-less bouyed up by expansion of employment.

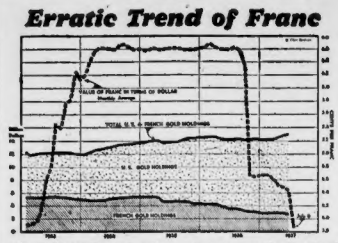
Erratic Trend of Franc



The highly-erratic trend of the French franc, as measured in our currency, is shown by this chart. Prior to the spring of 1933 and back in 1920 the franc was officially valued at slightly less than four cents in American money. When the dollar was cheapened in 1933-34 the franc inversely rose in value. The franc itself was cheapened by devaluation in 1936, and more recently the "pegs" were removed once again. Thus, the franc today is just about where it was prior to 1933.

When the United States "abandoned" the gold standard in 1933 we began to accumulate more and more gold. France, however, has been a consistent loser of the precious metal since early 1935, despite all its efforts.

Steel Wage Rate Above 1929 Level

Finished steel prices have been firmly maintained since last March when they were advanced sharply on an unusually high level, the Alexander Hamilton Institute finds. The average price of finished steel, according to the compilation by The Iron Age, is 2.605 cents per pound at the present time, as compared with 2.560 cents a year ago and with 1.873 cents at the low for the depression in April, 1933.

In addition to being 39.1 per cent above that low, present prices are 12.4 per cent above the pre-depression peak of 1929 when the average was 2.317 cents per pound.

An important factor accounting for the present high price of steel is the cost of labor. As a result of the increase which went into effect on March 16, average wage rates in April rose to a new high record of 85.6 cents per hour. This rate continuing to prevail, it compares with 65.5 cents in April last year and with the depression's low of 46.2 cents in June, 1933.

Wage rates at the present time are 28.9 per cent above the pre-depression peak of 66.4 cents in 1929. This compares with the increase of only 12.4 per cent in prices. It is thus evident that the current high price level is a necessity, especially since there has apparently been little increase in the productivity of labor since 1929 to offset the advance in wage rates.

Lowest steel prices are consequently not in immediate prospect since labor appears to be in too strong a position at the present time to submit to wage-cuts.

It is apparent that a sharp curtailment of production with accompanying unemployment must first occur before labor will agree to lower wages despite the fact that the workers' earnings are unreasonably high at the present time.

Although the cost of living in April was 11.8 per cent lower than in 1929, average earnings per worker were 12.4 per cent above the 1929 level with the increase in wage rates more than offsetting a reduction in the number of working hours.

BUSINESS

Expansion OF U. S.

MAY OUTSTRIP ALL NATIONS

The United States stands third among leading nations in business recovery from the depression low year, and is in a good position to pass the rest of the world, states a special report just issued by Brookmire.

Today America's production index is 84 per cent higher than in depression of 1932, which approximates the monthly average of 1929.

Early devaluation, in part, caused Japan and England to forge ahead of our recovery by many months. The American dollar's devaluation did not take place until the spring of 1933, so that its effect did not appear here until some time later, giving this nation a late start in the race for recovery.

Public works, relief, and a resultant budgetary inflation have all been important motivating forces making for expansion in this country. These and other recovery forces have carried many industries close to capacity operation. Domestic economy, therefore, is close to a point where much of the extraordinary forces might be removed and industrial progress would probably continue from needed construction of new production capacity.

However, government payments are not yet being eliminated. In fact, there is, so far, very little reduction in such expenditures, announce the report. A continuation of these expenditures combined with new production capacity needs, and a substantial housing requirement, are sufficient to push domestic business volumes to much better levels. This country is, therefore, in a good position to outstrip the rest of the world in the phases of this cycle that are still to come.

In general, points out Brookmire, armament and public works have supplied powerful expansive forces in the recovery cycles for all nations. The stimulus of these factors has helped productive volumes to approach capacity levels for many industries around the world. World price levels are broadly raising which with monetary and other stimulants lay the ground-work for a period of industrial capacity expansion.

Little relaxation in armament is thus far occuring, but broad rearmament expansion should contribute toward maintaining peace, and would add momentum to world expansion of production, which would find reflection in every quarter of the earth. The United States has particularly attractive economic prospects providing an internal basis for marked further economic improvement should receive additional benefits from continued progress in the rest of the world.

Despite unsatisfactory balance conditions, industrial production indexes are the most comparable figures and are broadly the most variegated, as is illustrated by the report on nations, which is as follows.

Most striking of all is the picture presented by Japan, which suffered only a minor loss in production in 1930 and continued to expand throughout the rest of the world's depression years.

Progress made in Japanese industry is largely attributable to two factors; namely, armament construction and expansion of foreign trade, which combined to effect broad recovery. Following in the wake of armament and public works expenditures, Germany has had a fair recovery in foreign trade, though this has not any way approached normal position in the country's economy.

Canada has accomplished an important degree of recovery largely without internal aid. The British Empire, of which Canada is a part, Ottawa, expansion in foreign trade, and the advent of U. S. crop failure have been leading causes of the recovery.

Continuance of business expansion, Canada will depend, in a large way, on further improvement in Great Britain and United States.

Great Britain was the first of the major countries of the world to devalue its currency. As a consequence of that step in the field of trade pact, depression was not as grave in that country as in others. A dominant force in the British recovery was a much needed building boom. This, however, came only after the stabilizing effect on internal economy of devaluation, cheap money, and the Ottawa trade pact. Housing construction in Great Britain has given evidence of having topped out, but in its place come armament and an expansion of production capacity in the affected lines as well as others which are recipients of the wage-earners' expenditures.

STRIKERS FIGHT AT LAUNDRY IN WINCHESTER

Only a few hours after 120 laundry workers walked out on strike today in Winchester, one man had been arrested, a girl picket was wearing an adhesive plaster across her nose and two men were declared to be seeking assault complaints against each other.

Under arrest was Joseph Morrow, engineer in the Winchester plant of the New England Laundries, Inc.

Morrow was seized by police and charged with assault and battery. He said he had merely gone to the aid of a union official who had been punched by a striker during an altercation.

In the melee, Miss Margaret Cannon, 20, a striker, received a punch on the bridge of her nose as it required patching before she could go back on the picket lines.

The strikers are seeking affiliation with the CIO, recognition of the union by the company, seniority rights, a 15 per cent wage increase and a week's vacation with pay.

BRANDS GREEN AN 'OBSTACLE'

New York, July 20 (AP)—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, is described by Heywood Broun, president of the American Newspaper Guild, as the "greatest single obstacle in the path of the labor movement."

The New York newspaper columnist made the statement in a counter attack against the federation head, who had asserted Broun was a "Communistic agent." In a verbal volley he fired at the guild's switch from the federation to the CIO.

Broun said he favored an immediate referendum vote of the "rank and file membership" of the guild on whether the organization should remain with the CIO.

Replying to Green's accusation that he was selling out "democracy down the river," the portly columnist said:

"I would like to thank him (Green) for clarifying the questions on which the American Newspaper Guild is divided. He has stated the issue correctly—it is Green or the guild."

UNION REFUSES SHIP PARLEY

Fall River, July 20—Refusal by union officials to go to New Haven to confer with railroad officials with a view to settling the strike that has tied up the steamer Commonwealth, marked the third day of the strike here today.

Union officials said they had more than 100 men on their hands since evacuation of the ship Sunday, to house, feed and care for and could not leave the scene here unless the company agreed to allow all the men to return to the ship.

They would confer with railroad officials here if they cared to come, they said.

Officials denied the sister ship of the Commonwealth, the Priscilla, had been evacuated and towed to Newport. They said the ship is still tied up in New York with the crew aboard.

Jury Probes 'Dope' in Strike Rioting

Chicago, July 20 (AP)—Investigation of a charge that strikers smoked narcotic cigarettes before engaging in the Memorial Day steel strike riot was ordered today at a coroner's jury inquest into the slaying of 10 men in the clash.

Coroner Frank Walsh instructed Policemen Philip Lupo and Patsy J. Mautner to appear as witnesses after the latter submitted information concerning the narcotics.

Igoe was one of the officers injured in the riot. He told Mautner, the latter declared, he had evidence demonstrators had been drugged, and that he found "scores" of the hand-rolled cigarettes.

Three other policemen who participated in the riot near the Republic Steel plant, also testified they used firearms in self-defense.

4 Men in Hospital After CIO Rioting

San Francisco, July 20 (AP)—Four men were in a hospital today as the result of a free-for-all that broke out last night when cannery workers seeking to hold an A. F. of L. organizational meeting clashed with CIO unionists.

Five carloads of police answered a riot call when CIO group met with fists 15 minutes after A. F. of L. men began trying to enter a hall.

Tug Reaches Cruiser

Washington, July 20 (AP)—The Navy Department said today the Navy tug Patriot had arrived at Castle Island Light, at the approach to Crooked Island passage in the Bahamas, to assist in floating the light cruiser Omaha, which went ashore there yesterday.

The Brighter Side

We have lately been wading knee-deep in American history, as depicted by our novelists.

Fashions in novel writing change from time to time, but the same as women's hats. Just now it appears that the vogue in America's novel writing is the historical novel, and we have had some mighty exciting hours leaping from chapter to chapter with the writing boys—and girls, too.

The current vogue was probably started by "Gone With the Wind," which was a pretty fair incentive to effort in the same general direction, at that, when you consider that it has sold up in figures reminiscent of Mr. Roosevelt's last plurality—and is still going. We note that some enterprising book publishers proclaim their own historical products take "Gone With the Wind" as an advertising standard of literary merit.

These publishers say their wares are "better than 'Gone With the Wind'" and not to a literary critic, and we would not know about that, but it sounds as like trying to run down the 1-to-4 favorite in a horse race.

It can be done, occasionally, to be sure, but it is not sound judgment to attempt it.

GRADE-A STORY

We do not suppose "Gone With the Wind" is any literary masterpiece. Nonetheless, it is a cracking good story, and great entertainment, and making a lot of money, so it fulfills nearly all our theories of the excuses for writing at all, which are (a) to instruct, (b) to amuse, (c) to get the money.

In any event, we are grateful to the lady who wrote "Gone with the Wind," for starting the '30-'37 vogue that has given us a barrel of excitement lately in Richmond, Virginia, during the Civil War with Mr. Clifford Dowdey, in "Bugles Blow No More." This is a jilly of a story, too.

We have only one mild beef about these yarns. They make our Northern (North Manhattan) blood berl, as they say in Brooklyn, by their insistence on nearly all Yankees as bums.

Our Uncle Heber was a member of the Union army, and we always like to say that he left a few pigs, and very little silverware during his journey in the South.

Mr. Walter Edmonds is at the moment our favorite historian of early events in upstate New York, and environs, in his "Drums Along the Mohawk."

PUT ERIE CANAL ON MAP

Mr. Edmonds is the fellow who put the Erie Canal on the fiction map with "Rome Haul" and other tales of the days when the big waterway meant something in the world of transportation.

Somebody made a play out of "Rome Haul," called "The Farmer Takes a Wife," and while it was not exactly a smash hit, it will always remain one of our favorite plays. The late Herb Williams, one of the greatest comedians that ever lived, was a member of the cast, and so was the actress named Miss Jones Walker, who wore a long skirt, and stepped with a stride that was the envy of her sex.

"If I had a lot of money," said Mr. Irving Caesar, the song writer, "I would hire Miss Jane Walker, and when I felt tired and distraught I would say, 'Honey, give that walk like you did it in that play,' and then I would be all cheered up again."

We are making ready to square away at Mr. Myron C. Roberts' "Northwest Passage," another historical tale. But, in the meantime, we have finished a yarn called "Paradise," by a Miss Esther Forbes. It is a story of the early days of the Massachusetts Bay Colony.

If we were trying to mow down the favorite, "Gone With the Wind," this is the one we would try with. Miss Forbes is quite a writer, and Miss Mitchell's chances are she is Missus. These lady novelists nearly always turn out to be married folks.

WHY ALWAYS "MISS"

This no knock, you understand, but merely a statement of fact. We are going to take time out some day to see if we can ascertain why lady novelists, and actresses and cashiers and models, and other female accomplishers who are married, are always putting themselves away as Miss.

Anyway, Miss Forbes has written herself quite a story in "Paradise." It is long and blood-and-thunder, which is the kind of story we love. Moreover, Miss Forbes can write about them. She has considerable facility in putting one word after another.

WOMEN INSIST WIVES FACE WPA BAN

Boston women today denounced the WPA job attitude of Miss Charl Ormond Williams, president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

The latter protested against an appeal of the Massachusetts Women's Political Club that married women be discharged first in any WPA personnel reduction.

They were unanimous in the opinion that the WPA was a dole and that need, rather than merit and efficiency, should guide the choice of its personnel.

Miss Florence Birmingham, president of the Massachusetts Women's Political Club, accused Miss Williams of being a career woman first and a humanitarian second in her insistence that married women be allowed to remain in the WPA ranks.

ARGUES STAND

Miss Birmingham said:

"Miss Williams calls the appeal of the Massachusetts Women's Political Club that married women be discharged first in any WPA personnel reduction an oblique attack upon the rights of all women.

"It is merely an insistence that the principle of need rule the personnel.

"Miss Williams in opposing such an appeal shows herself to lack humanitarian instincts. Her insistence that married women be allowed equal rights is an example of the selfish career woman who considers nothing beyond her own personal happiness.

"The WPA is the dole. It was devised at a great burden to taxpayers just to give the needy work, not to supply jobs for married women who insist upon a career.

"In Massachusetts, financially independent women have taken advantage of these projects."

Miss Sybil Holmes, prominent woman lawyer of Boston, was also in disagreement.

She said:

"Need, not merit, should rule dismissal from WPA. If a married woman has other means of support she should give way to others.

"The WPA was organized to alleviate need. And when it comes to the emergency measure, economic need should be the controlling factor and not the 'merit principle' as Miss Williams calls it.

"There are two issues there. When it comes to civil service, I think efficiency and ability should control the situation. But the WPA is another thing again and should not be controlled or judged in the same manner.

"And it follows that under normal circumstances the married woman is probably better off financially than others.

OTHERS PROTEST

Mrs. Theresa Sheridan, of Watertown, chairman of the Watertown branch of the Massachusetts Political Club, and herself the mother of five children, says, in answer to Miss Williams:

"All women interested in the welfare of the nation should be willing to forego their position to help their single sisters.

"Married women who insist upon careers are encroaching upon the rights and liberties of single women to work."

Mrs. Carrie F. Sheehan Von Baisan, of Charlestown, member of the club, also opposed the sentiments of Miss Williams.

"The WPA is an emergency measure," she said. "Need should be considered and not merit. WPA is no place for career women."

LYNCH RESIGNS IN CAMBRIDGE

After weeks of denials and counter-denials, Thomas A. Lynch, city solicitor of Cambridge, today submitted his resignation to Mayor John D. Lynch.

To date both men had vigorously denied there was any fraction between them or that there had been any talk of resignation.

Mayor Lynch said curtly:

"The resignation is accepted. There is no reason."

At the same time the mayor appointed George A. McLaughlin, Cambridge attorney, to the post of city solicitor.

McLaughlin has been active in Cambridge politics and is president of the Massachusetts Police Association.

Boston Man Hurt As Driver Sleeps

Leeds, July 20 (AP)—Arthur Marder of Norwich, Ct., escaped unscathed today when his automobile crashed through a bridge rail over Beaver Brook and tumbled down a eight-foot embankment.

His companion, Louis Borans of Boston, suffered bruises. Murder and investigators he fell asleep the driving all night en route to Boston from Buffalo, N. Y.

Drowning in Bay, Man Is Rescued By Police

The alert eye of Patrolman Richard Hines of the harbor police early today saved the life of Peter J. Mullen, 44, of I street, South Boston, who had clung for two hours in his overturned skiff off the Army Base.

On patrol duty in the police boat Watchman, Hines discerned a vague object in the pitch blackness and flashed his light on it. He saw Mullen, exhausted from his long immersion, feebly clinging to the side of the skiff.

Hines and Patrolman Frank Eldridge took Mullen aboard and transfered him to Haymarket Relief hospital, where he was treated for immersion, and his condition pronounced not serious.

Mullen told the officers he had been fishing with friends and decided to row to the I street "reserve channel" Near Castle Island he shifted his weight and overturned his craft. He attempted to swim ashore but was forced to turn back to the boat when he became tired. The craft drifted to the point where he was rescued.

But for the chance arrival of the Watchman and his discovery by Hines, Mullen undoubtedly would have drifted to sea or drowned through exhaustion, police said.

2 Pittsfield Men Killed in Crash

He leaves five daughters and a son, including Mrs. Harry Ledgard and Mrs. Columbus Bainville of Maynard, Mrs. Archie Harding of Malden and Dr. Louis Sullivan of Lewis, Mass.

Twists Lion's Tail

BOY'S DAD HAS TO PAY $5 FINE

New York, July 20 (AP)—Little Gabriel Klein, aged seven, twisted the lion's tail at the Bronx zoo and it cost his father five bucks.

Adam, the lion, was backed up against the bars with his tail hanging out. It tantalized Gabriel and he climbed over an outside guard rail and tweaked the appendage.

The lion roared and made a paw at Gabriel, and Gabriel's father quickly grabbed him back over the guard rail. Gabriel let out a yell, and up ran Patrolman Michael McEvery.

The officer suggested in Magistrate's Court today that the father, William Klein, was at fault in the transaction, because

"The child did pull the tail of the lion, thereby exposing said child to personal danger, in violation of Chapter 17, Section 19."

Klein pleaded guilty and paid the $5 fine.

Zoo attendants said the lion was very agreeable usually, but had been on edge the last few days because of a three-ply blessed event in the family, and that they wouldn't think of twisting his tail under any circumstances.

Would Drop Rail Line

Providence, R. I., July 20 (AP)—Discontinuance of all passenger service on the Warren-Bristol Branch Line, serving a territory on the eastern shores of Narragansett Bay, was sought of the public utilities division today by the New Haven Railroad.

Chinery lay in a pool of blood in the bathroom. The body of his wife, clad only in underwear, was in an adjoining bedroom. Her body was covered with bruises.

THIS IS LIFE

—By

Robert E. Rogers

ROBERT E. ROGERS

Was it Supreme Court justices or college presidents of whom somebody once said "Few die and none resign"? As a matter of fact, I suspect it was neither, but that doesn't matter.

Twill serve as a little peg on which to hang the fact that Dr. Tyler Dennett has just resigned as president of Williams College after only three years, with the probability that he will be succeeded by Professor James P. Baxter, Williams alumnus and historian at Harvard.

Probably it isn't a matter of great importance to anybody outside the little circle of Williams interests. I always chirk up a little at a Williamstown date line because the day after I was graduated from Harvard, Dean Briggs, the all-merciful and all-compassionate, wrangled me a temporary job to fill in for brother Dutton of the Williams English department, who was getting him a Ph. D.

Year and College Nice, But Not the Students

The year was nice and the college was nice. Likewise were the purple hills, autumn and spring but NOT the winter, and the boys. On the whole they tended to be a well-bred prep school crowd and were proud of it. President Dennett's last winter remarks that the college needed more rough-necks (or words to that effect) probably did not please them.

But they are hard to please. The year before I went there to teach, Harry Garfield had been inaugurated president. I am told that never during his twenty-five years of office was he really popular.

Even in my day the boys tended to drape sprinkling carts and omnibuses and such over his lawn, tastefully adorned with domestic and even intimate bricabrac and impedimenta.

A year after I left, Dr. Garfield, trying to make over the curriculum, found himself with a real undergraduate fight on his hands, led by James W. King, now of the Transcript. The trouble with Williams is that it is a small college in a small town and the place is a hot-bed of gossip.

Faculty and towns-folk and students are eternally mulling over matters of harmless controversy and making them not so harmless.

Bound to Be President Or Know Reason Why

Dr. Dennett seems to be an independent kind of man who is bound to be president of the college or to know why.

Like most other college presidents in the United States he is surrounded by a bunch of trustees most of whom have been elected (on the self perpetuating basis) by other successful business executives because they are successful business executives.

Usually they are willing for the president to run the educational plant, providing they can run the real estate. They are usually inclined to believe that running the real estate is the more important part of college administration.

The principle for which Dr. Dennett has resigned is really a fairly important one. In England, for instance, the fellows (teachers) ARE the college. They own and manage its real estate as well as control its educational policies.

But when Harvard crossed from Cambridge, England, the college suffered somehow a sea-change. That body variously named the Fellows and Overseers, the Corporation, or the Trustees, were put in over the heads of the working tutors and professors.

Feels College Head Now Just a Hired Man

What it really amounted to was control by the Church, later superceded by control by the Law, the Banks, and, nowadays, largely by the Alumni.

In Dr. Dengett's resentful phrase, used often in this connection, the American college president has become a hired man who decides educational policies with the Trustees' permission while the Trustees decide real estate and investment policies without necessarily consulting the president.

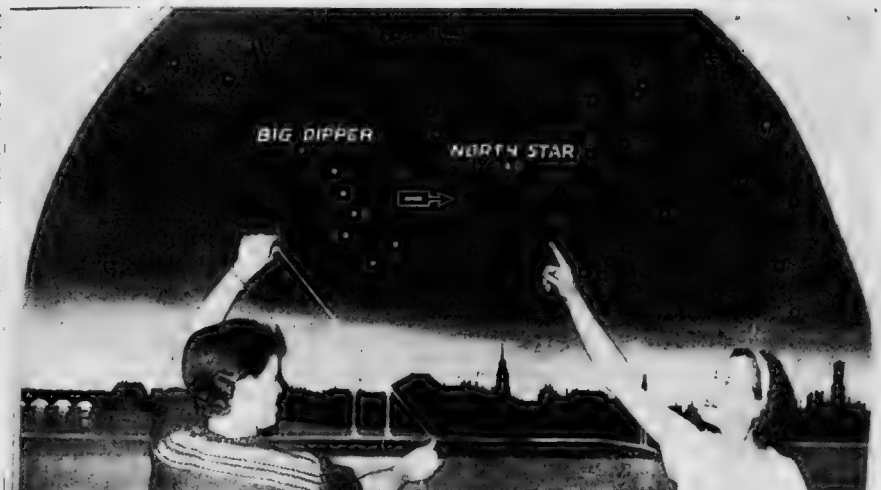
That is why Dr. Dennett has resigned. He asked for a "suspensive veto" as president on all polices usually decided by the Trustees. Not getting it he gets out.

More power to him, although personally I should just as soon have my policies decided by a bunch of bankers as by the Army or Navy, any religious denomination, a labor union, or a state legislature.

The policy by which our eastern endowed colleges have been built up has worked pretty well. A combination of business enterprise and educational conservatism is a pretty good combination, after all.

NEW COMET TO STAGE HEAVENLY SHOW AUGUST 7

Look Quickly—It's Traveling 1800 Miles Per Minute



Flaming across the northern sky at a speed of 1800 miles per minute, the comet Finsler makes its appearance Sunday night at 10 o'clock, and you can see it yourself if you study the photograph above. At the right is Elizabeth Brettenstein, Harvard Observatory attache, who shows you how to make a 45-degree angle toward the North Star. Mary Hunt, of the Observatory staff, gives you an idea of what a 75-degree angle looks like. The diagram explains the path of the comet. The arrow indicates where the comet will be at 10 o'clock Sunday night.

Waltham Crossing Tender Drops Dead

John M. Frost, 73, of Main street, crossing tender for the Boston & Maine railroad at the central Massachusetts branch, dropped dead today at Waltham High's depot station. Death was due to natural causes.

Frost had reported for work as usual. While talking with acquaintance he collapsed.

Curtain Will Rise on Scene Promptly at 10 Sunday Night

Switch a [illegible] along that the Finsler zoomed across the fifth magnitude early Yesterday the town line of Cygnus, spliced a corner of Cepheus and Perseus, and whirled up toward the North Star.

It is there, according to Dr. Fred L. Whipple, of the Harvard Observatory, that readers of the Boston Evening American may put their finger on Finsler Sunday, August 7, 10 p.m. D.S.T.—even though it hurtles through space at the rate of 1800 miles per minute.

Below the simple directions of Dr. Whipple who spent yesterday afternoon plunking an adding machine to keep up with miles by the millions, tracing a needle point pencil over a chart of the sky.

Said Dr. Whipple:

"Get up on your roof, or locate yourself in a wide open space, shortly before 10 o'clock next Sunday night. If you do not know where the due north position is, bring your compass.

"When you find due north, you will also locate Polaris, the North Star. That is easily done by sighting your right arm upward at a 45 degree angle. Right off your fingertips you will have the North Star."

Then the job according to Dr. Whipple is to look directly to the left where a short distance below the North Star you will recognize the Big Dipper, a constellation of stars which on Sunday night must hang in the sky as if it were spilling out the last drop in the dipper.

Locating the Perseus constellation just beyond the comet passing through the B, Dipper at the point where the handle joins the "dipper" Precisely at the stroke of 10 p.m. Finsler will be perfectly situated to be naked eye about 30 degrees from the Big Dipper. That is one-third the distance from the Big Dipper, between that constellation and the North Star.

Dr. Whipple had only one gloomy judgement on the idea.

"Please keep in mind the night must be absolutely clear. You can readily distinguish the comet from the stars. While the stars are five-pointed, the comet is irregular and hazy, looking much like an illuminated ball of cotton in the sky. A good pair of field glasses would help a lot."

Dr. Whipple stated [illegible] is 50 million miles away with no chance [illegible] earth. Freed in City Hospital.

Girl Plunge Victim Goes Under Knife

Her brother Mr. [illegible] Gallo said [illegible] operation will [illegible] [illegible] answer [illegible] that they assisted the girl before she gasped.

In an attempt to save her life an emergency operation was performed yesterday by Dr. Charles F. [illegible]

FUN AT HALF PRICE

LOUISE DOHERTY VIRGINIA DOHERTY THERESA THOMAS

Louise Doherty, Virginia Doherty and Theresa Thomas, of Boston, in the foreground, have a thrilling time on the Whip, one of the many interesting feature rides at Paragon Park. They were just a few of the hundreds who went to Paragon Park on a Nantasket Boat yesterday as guests of the Boston Sunday Advertiser. These as well as the other children and grownups clipped coupons from the Sunday paper to enjoy all rides and concessions at half price.

WINS FIGHT FOR LIFE

Coupons Spell Fun at Revere

Tomorrow comes the first of 1937 Nickel Days at Revere Beach, and in today's editions of the Boston Evening American are published more than half a hundred coupons spelling fun at low cost.

All you need do to assure a full day of entertainment at the famed beach resort is clip these coupons and present them, with a nickel, or two nickels, as stated on each, and your day is made inexpensive.

In the event of rain tomorrow the coupons will be good on Thursday instead and between the same hours, 11 a. m. and 5 p. m.

Worcester, July 20—Joseph Provencher, [illegible] North Brookfield, whose life was despaired of when haemophilia—rare bleeding malady—ravished his little body today, had apparently won his fight for life.

After [illegible] days and [illegible] hours [illegible] stop the flow of blood from a minor skin wound, doctors at Memorial Hospital announced Joseph was on the road to recovery, but extraordinary care must be taken in the future to keep him alive.

Where an ordinary individual can disregard a slight cut Joseph must take unusual precautions to avoid any breakage of his skin. When this happens he starts to bleed and it is doubtful if the flow of precious [illegible] can be stopped.

The boy was sent to Memorial Hospital when he received a small cut on his scalp while playing. Once before a year and a half ago he received a similar cut and for days his life hung in the balance.

Missing State Ward Is Sought

Joseph Ugi, 8, a state ward who disappeared from Lowell street, Lynn, yesterday, is being sought by police today. Police believe he ran away from the house where he had been placed by the state. When last seen he was wearing a blue and white blouse, blue overalls and brown sneakers.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

—By

Marjorie McBride

MARJORIE McBRIDE

Taxidermy is becoming increasingly popular among New Englanders in search of a hobby, according to Mrs. Edward Shaw, one of the partners in the Shaw Studios in Malden. She is one of the few women in the East to take up taxidermy professionally.

Usually, the first specimen mounted by an amateur is a squirrel or a small bird. After that the germ is planted and it's like a disease. The ex-amateur goes around mouthing fish large and small game even pet dogs. Naturally, amateurs have to learn the trick than the specimens they mount would bring in any market, but they don't care.

There is a certain satisfaction in being able to point at a stuffed salmon on your wall and brag that you caught him and stuffed him, too. Speaking of fish, Mrs. Shaw reminds newcomers that they're the hardest things to mount. The taxidermist has to remember the natural colors and paint them back on, for the radiant colors a sporting fish flashes when you see him in the water vanish after he has been subjected to the preservative process.

Mrs. Shaw has been at it eight years and has mounted everything from a hummingbird to a bear. Lots of amateurs go to her for the first lesson. The studio rents heads too . . . elks' heads and moose heads . . . lodges that don't have their own go to the Shaws. Promoters of fish and game dinners also are steady customers, for decorations.

Taxidermy Far From Being a Simple Art

Taxidermy in a professional way isn't nearly as simple as hopeful amateurs expect. Stuffing the specimens isn't the half of it. The practitioner must have some knowledge of modelling, anatomy, painting in oils, chemistry, interior decorating. Small animals and birds are the easiest. One needs a delicate touch to preserve the bird's plumage, however.

Mounting butterflies and insects calls for artistry of a high order. At the other end of the scale the taxidermist is called on often to convert a trophy pelt into a rug.

Backers of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, which opens August 5 in Stockbridge, have four claims to distinction. They have fixed it so nobody will make money out of the annual festival. Second, nobody's going to spoil the natural beauty of the countryside with "monumental" temples or statues.

Third, Serge Koussevitsky, art director, isn't trying to copy Salzburg or the big European festivals. Fourth, the festival managers aren't in any quarrel with the other cultural activities flourishing in that neighborhood.

On the contrary, the festival announcements mention all other such enterprises in a very complimentary way.

Miniature Tableware Latest Fad of Stars

In Hick's window at 81 Charles street is displayed a minature set of solid silver tableware. There are also tiny doll sets of china to be placed on little tables. The whole thing represents a fad brought over from England by Constance Collier, the movie actress.

Maureen O'Sullivan, the screen star, is among those to take up the hobby, and is a small duplicate set of her own flat silver pattern. She uses it as a centerpiece on her dinner table. Not an inexpensive bit of bric-a-brac if you're curious. Some of the tiny sets cost as much as $75!

Mrs. Jane B. Allen of Gloucester, traveling representative of a glue and ink concern, probably is the only woman "drummer" in the East to make her rounds on a bicycle. Her territory is Springfield and adjoining towns.

She began cycling six years ago to save money toward her daughter's education, but has gotten such returns in health and happiness, she wouldn't think of going back to train schedules or an automobile.

Danno-Casey Can Solve Problem | Turf Classic Fan Here Today

By JACK CONWAY

THE WINNER OF the finish wrestling bout between Dan O'Mahony and Steve Casey at Fenway Park tonight will have a better chance than anybody else to gain an undisputed claim to the world's championship.

MR. BOSTON

As Danno and Steve prepare to sweep into action at Paul Bowser's big show, there are as many mat champions as there are actors in the United States. There has not been an undisputed title holder since O'Mahony was pinned by Dick Shikat and Yvon Robert.

The Shikat title claim was washed out when he lost to Ali Baba who in turn was tossed by an unknown by the name of Levin. Dean Detton eventually caught up with Levin, but was beaten himself recently in Minneapolis by Bronko Nagurksi, the old Minnesota football player.

I believe either O'Mahoney or Casey could knock off any of these champions. Robert is the best of the lot, but he has been so inactive as a result of a broken leg that he could not hope to win from either Danno or Casey without a long siege of training.

It is seldom that two athletes have covered as much time and care to getting into condition for a bout as O'Mahony and Casey have in preparing for their conflict at Fenway Park tonight. I look for one of the fastest, hardest and most bitter mat conflicts ever witnessed in New England.

It will have the big crowd on its feet cheering.

Danno against Big Steve will produce the kind of thrills the public wishes.

It is my wish that the better man wins, and I am confident he will do so.

Whether the better man is the youthful Danno with his amazing color or the rugged Casey with his tremendous power and determination I know that wrestling will benefit. There will be a 100 per cent athlete on the way up toward the championship.

Rough Time Against Clingendaal

ROUGH TIME and Clingendaal, trials in the three-year-old fee are expected to clash again in the Yankee Stakes which will be run over a distance of a mile and three sixteenths at Suffolk Downs on Saturday. There is little question but that Rough Time is a better sprinter than Clingendaal but it is a question whether the former can step with his rival over the longer route.

The speedy Rudie owned by Bill Gallagher and trained by Ire capably by Johnny Donovan. Secretariat Hoots, Medelat and Miss Wilkie are also expected to start in the Yankee Stakes.

The race was won a year ago by Memory Book who was rated a long easy until he hit the far turn. Memory Book then made his move, and was running over horses at the head of the stretch.

Other than the Massachusetts Handicap, which will be run on August 7, the Yankee Stakes is the outstanding race on the Suffolk Downs program.

Tommy Farr Here for Bout

TOMMY FARR 24-year-old Welshman, has arrived in this country to begin training for his title bout with Brother Joe Louis which will be staged by Mike Jacobs Twentieth Century Club at the Yankee Stadium, New York, on August 26. On the voyage he was getting from past performances Farr was one to the hard hitting Louis.

Farr is strictly a boxer who is said to be a fair hitter. His chief ring triumph was his defeat of Max Baer whom he jabbed into the latter was dizzy.

Farr will give the title bout a touch of international color and this will add to the gate receipts.

You may be certain the Welshman will have any fears of Louis' punch. Down through the ages Welsh hearts have been among the most courageous to enter the ring.

James Wilde a Welshman and former world's flyweight champion gave the greatest exhibition of raw courage I ever witnessed in the ring. Wilde long past his athletic peak was defending his title against the sensational Pancho Villa in the ring at the Polo Grounds, New York.

Villa punched harder than any other fighter that ever lived. He knocked Wilde down repeatedly with crushing punches to the head and body. Yet the gallant Welshman kept getting up.

The referee begged to stop the bout in view of the charges before the match by English sports writers that the American referee would give the decision to Villa on the color question.

Finally Wilde was so badly beaten that when he would pull himself up off the canvas he could not raise his hands to defend himself. He would instinctively stumble toward Villa, and take unscientific punches on his defenceless jaw. He would go down again, but would eventually get to his feet.

It was necessary to carry Wilde from the ring, and treat him for a week at a private home in Jersey before it was possible for him to meet visitors. It was the most brutal fight I ever witnessed as well as the greatest exhibition of raw courage.

Joe Louis hasn't got the kind of courage that made Wilde a ring king. I don't know whether Tommy Farr has it either, but I do feel he will try to live up to the highest traditions of his people when he wades into action against the Brown Bomber.

If he does, there may be a break in the bout where courage will count more than fighting ability, and Farr may upset the "dope" by coming on to win.

Browns Ahead Of '36 Record

St. Louis, July 20 (AP)—The St. Louis Browns, with less than half the 77-game schedule completed for 1937 have drawn more cash customers than went to Sportsman's Park for Browns' games all last season.

Including Sunday's 44,01 paid for the double header with the last place Athletics the total paid is 99,025. Less than 93,000 paid in 1936.

Montague May Yet Become America's Wealthiest Athlete

This is the third and final chapter of the story of John Montague, the massive mystery man and marvel of the golf course, who for seven years has amazed and fascinated Hollywood.

By JAMES LEE

Copyright 1937 by Universal Service and Los Angeles Examiner

Hollywood, July 20—John Montague may become America's wealthiest athlete. Regardless of the outcome of his present difficulties, Hollywood's Paul Bunyan is "set" for the future.

When, as he hopes, he clears up the New York State indictment charging him, under his true name, La Verne Moore, with participation in a roadhouse holdup seven years ago, he can start amassing the fortune that awaits him.

And even if there is, due to the exigencies of the law, a delay, Montague still will be able to take the path of fame and gold.

And he can begin cashing in on his amazing strength, his miraculous golfing prowess, his virile good looks, and the legend that has grown from his seven-year stay in Hollywood.

Hearing July 26

He is backed by a legion of notables. Among them are: Bing Crosby, Guy Kibbee, Gene Tunney, Oliver Hardy, George Von Elm, and others.

Montague is anxious to get rapid action on the New York matter. His Hollywood friends are aiding him in his fight to escape extradition. The case will come to a head July 26 when the hearing is held.

Now that his mask of mystery has been dropped, some of his closest friends expect that the taciturn marvel will marry.

His name has been linked with that of Mrs. Esther Plunkett, wealthy and beautiful Beverly Hills widow.

But the habit of mystery has become so much a part of Monty's makeup during his years in Hollywood that he still is unwilling to comment on that pleasant possibility.

He is, he says, extremely desirous of "clearing up" the New York matter—in which he is accused of being one of four men who on August 5, 1930, held up the Kin Hanna roadhouse at Jay, N. Y., and robbed the proprietor of $700. He says:

"I'm anxious to get back home and clean off the slate. I'd like to see the family and my friends back in Syracuse. But Hollywood will always be my home.

"If it's within my power, I want to stay here with Bing, and Babe Hardy and Guy Kibbee and the other guys who have been so swell to me."

The "folks back home" are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Moore, his two sisters, and his brother, Harold. The latter is a church organist and golf professional. It was Harold who aroused Monty's interest in golf. But Harold never was able to beat him.

And even before he left Syracuse, dropped the La Verne ("Bull") Moore identity, drifted into Hollywood and became John Montague, Monty was regarded as a golfing phenomenon.

Pyle Needed

Ruminating on what-might-have-been, Montague remarked:

"I had a tryout with the Boston Braves, and I would have been a big league pitcher.

"I could have gone to college and played football.

"I could have become a professional fighter or wrestler.

"But I'm glad I came to Hollywood and stuck to golf, and things turned out the way they did, for I've found out one important thing, and that is there's nothing which will alienate real friends."

With the barriers removed now, and no longer forced to dodge publicity, Montague wants to "go to town." When he does, it will be a field day for whomever handles his exploitation.

Where else can you find a man who can play golf better with a rake, a shovel, and a baseball bat than most players can with a full set of clubs?

Where else can you find a man who never saw a golf course he couldn't par, a foe he couldn't whip in a fair fight, or a friend who didn't idolize him.

'Just Starting'

Monty still is enigmatic about the possibility of a screen career, but at Lakeside Golf Club, his headquarters, producer pals of the "mystery marvel" are anxious to sign him up.

Nearly six feet tall, weighing 215 pounds without an ounce of superfluous flesh, handsome, curly-headed, blue-eyed, deep-voiced, he is, they say, a "natural" for the films.

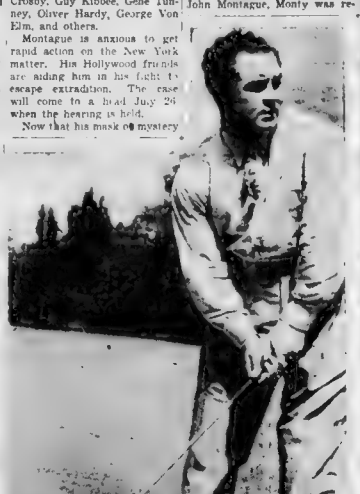
There's a chance that the "Paul Bunyan of the fairways" will be replaced by "Monty of the movies."

But whatever he does, Montague, by his exploits on the golf course, his demonstrations of super-strength and his easy ingress into Hollywood's most exclusive circles, already has contributed an intriguing chapter to the lighter side of modern history.

And, take it from him:

"I'm not through yet. In fact, I've just started."

(THE END)



Still Quite a Drive

John Montague, Hollywood's famed mystery golfer, shows how he hits those tremendous drives. Above we see him on the fairway. At lower left he sizes up the situation and sees he needs a full wood shot to reach. In center we see him at the height of his stroke. Notice the form. Upper right, the drive is completed, and the pellet is off on a long ride. Many champions claim Montague is the perfect golfer. He has the swing, the co-ordination and the power.

Sox Always Lose Before Yawkey

By JOE CASHMAN

[illegible] 20 [illegible] Yawkey is a great guy and a sweet [illegible] and never guess it from [illegible] by Tom Yawkey [illegible] him.

They seem to make it a point of winning when [illegible] and losing when he is [illegible]

They had a [illegible] home stay during the last [illegible] at Fenway Park. The [illegible] there. He met his hired hands in New York and they [illegible] a double-header in the Yards.

They left him behind there and went on to take seven out of eight in Philadelphia and St. Louis. Marse Tom joined them in Chicago and they dropped four straight to the White Sox, falling from second to fourth place.

The boy boss shouldn't have been surprised. It was the same on the last western trip. He went all around that time and saw his million dollar toy win but four times in 11 starts.

In fact the only successful road jaunt the Sox have had in three years was during a time the youthful owner was in Alaska hunting. But Tom hangs right on smiling and uncomplaining, hoping that sooner or later his hired hands will overcome their road jitters and reward his perseverance by staging a winning streak for him out here on the trail.

They still have time to do it on this trek over with three games to play with the Tigers starting this p. m. and four tilts to run off in three days in Cleveland. But they'll have to be a lot classier, steadier and luckier than they were in Chicago to do it.

Better umpiring would help too. The worst they expected and the worst they should have had in the Windy City was an even split. All the breaks and decisions went against them, however, and their pitching and fielding and batting faltered with the result that they dropped all four games.

The Monday setback was a heart breaker. John Marcum looked like a 4 to 2 winner up to the eighth. The Chisox then chased him but he'd still won if Bobby McNair hadn't fumbled a grounder just enough so that he could only get one man instead of making a double play which would have ended the inning. The Chisox took advantage of that life to rally and win 6-4.

Jack Wilson, seeking to be the first Sox pitcher to win ten games, will open against the Tigers today. Our heroes must sweep the series to take third place from the Bengals.

Sauer to Succeed Cowell at N.H.

Durham, N. H., July 20 (AP)—George Sauer, former all-America football star at University of Nebraska has been appointed head football coach at the University of New Hampshire.

Sauer will succeed Bill Cowell who had been head coach for 22 years and who resigned the first ball post to limit his activities to direction of the athletic department.

Wicker Replaces Broaca for Yanks

Cleveland July 20 (AP)—As the Yankees left here for St. Louis Manager Joe McCarthy announced that Southpaw Kemp Wicker had been recalled from the Newark International League cl[illegible].

Wicker will replace Johnny Broaca, the right-hander who jumped the club and was fined $250 and suspended for 30 days.

Defender Beaten

Olcott, N. Y., July 20 (AP)—Smartly handled in a light breeze the Royal Canadian Yacht Club's six-meter sloop Aphrodite, from Toronto, defeated Olcott's defender Mist, in the first race of a challenge match for the George Cup.

DIZZY Joins Cards HERE

SERIES OPENS TODAY

The Gas House Gang is in town again.

Those hard boiled babies from St. Louis arrived here this morning ready to open hostilities with the Bees at 3 p. m. this afternoon at the Hive.

They will be in our midst for three days to engage in four battling, two of them tomorrow. And in this short visit, those Cardinals will really have to get rolling or they might as well forget about the 1937 pennant.

Those cold league averages show that the visitors after losing three out of four to the Giants are in fourth place, seven and one-half games behind the league leading Cubs.

In fact Frisch has placed so much stress on this series that he sent in a hurry call for Dizzy Dean and the great one is now en route to Boston.

It looks now as if Frisch will have to put his ace right to work, and he may pitch one of the two games tomorrow.

There is a chance that he will again hook up in a hurling duel with Lou Fette as the Bees freshman star is slated to take the hill tomorrow.

Frisch has a badly depleted mound staff and may have to call on Bob Klinger to do the relieving although the former Red Sox hurler has had only a two days rest.

If Robert does get the call he faces old Guy Bush. Manager Bill McKechnie has definitely decided to use Bush today, Fette and Max Fayden tomorrow, and Turner the final.

Bush will have Heinie Mueller on the receiving end of his game. Lopez is set for at least a start with a broken digit and Thomas the entire catching staff.

Jim Dudley Named Bourne Pilot

Wareham, July 20—Jim Dudley former Harvard catcher, has been appointed manager of the Bourne entry in the Cape Cod League.

Dudley, regular catcher on the club, replaces Wade Rush, Yarmel coach of all sports at Lowell, Texas.

Armstrong Stops Massey in Fourth

New York, July 20 (U.S.)—Henry Armstrong of Los Angeles scored a technical knockout over Lew Massey of Philadelphia in the fourth round of a scheduled ten-rounder here.

Massey was being battered so severely, Commissioner Coglin employed a seldom-used privilege and halted the bout.

AUSTEN LAKE

CORK FARM BOY vs. KERRY KINGFISH

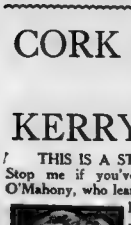
THIS IS A STORY ABOUT TWO IRISHMEN. Stop me if you've heard it. It seems that Dan O'Mahony, who learned to grunt, whinney and moo on his father's farm in West Cork, is wrestling Steve Casey, the South Kerry fisherman, who wishes to be wrestled with later by Yvon Robert for one of the numerous heavyweight titles. The evening's merriment may be a step in advancement toward Casey's goal, though this must not be taken as gospel. I refrain from doing the unkindness of predicting victory for either boy, because to do so would be pretty sure to condemn him with the authorities, which prefer the unexpected whenever conditions are practically even.



AUSTEN LAKE

Casey is a large, portly adult of frightening appearance but without much wrestling culture, though to give him his just due, and no more, his pick-and-shovel power is as imposing as any of the shaggy Europeans, though his chest tones are less noisy. This is a handicap, because the physical work of wrestling is secondary to the vocal. Having been a fisherman, Steve lacked the facilities to study barnyard effects, as did Danno.

Casey appears to have the cruder kind of stevedore strength and more of it. But O'Mahony has acquired more histrionic gloss since he was uncrated on the docks in the winter of 1934 and, if the producers take the halter off his neck, he may irish Casey out tonight. Not having read the libretto, I cannot guess.

Danno Last of Undivided Champions

DANNO HAS BEEN A CHAMPION BEFORE, and I believe the last undivided champion before the title was split up into several parts and redistributed around the country. Still, there have been previous champions who have been heaved and then enjoyed personal revivals. Like Ed Don George, who was foully dealt with by Strangler Lewis some years ago in violation of the unpublished covenant between factions of the Trust. But that was patched up in a typical way by catching Strangler in Montreal and disqualifying him in the famous "biting episode," wherein Henri DiGlane displayed some telltale molar marks on his arm and was awarded the title by the local French-Canadian Commissioner. It was reported on good authority later that DiGlane bit himself.

And Danno was foully dealt with, too, when a renegade wheel-horse named Dick Shikat nearly wrenched his arms out by the roots and then scuttled away to hide the title in the mid-Western weeds. I have lost track of the swift disposition of the championship since then, which was loaned to a baz-man named Ali-Baba who passed it to Dave Levin who slipped it to Gene Denton. Where it is now no man can say, though there are half a dozen wrestlers pretending they have it, like Everett Marshall, Bronco Nagurski, Don Lopez and Yvon Robert, none of whom are on tangling terms and hence, like Humpty-dumpty, may never put the pieces together again.

Danno Was Best Against George

SO TONIGHT'S AFFAIR BETWEEN DANNO and Steve has dwindled to the championship of Ireland, though I am frank to say there are some Dublin, Cork, Athlone, Tralee, Dingle and Galway cops who look meaty and boney enough to scramble either man.

I like to think of Danno best the night that he won his championship from Ed George and was lying entwined near the ring apron, with an armful of foot and twisting it in an absent way like a brakeman hauling on a hand lever. And presently it became evident that George was also yanking and swiveling away at a foot himself.

So both wrestlers were heaving back their chins, squinting the eyes and roaring with agony, when a local reporter in the press benches observed to George, "Excuse me, sir, but do you realize that you are yanking your own foot and that Mr O'Mahony is twisting his.

So, George thanked him politely and let go. Only, to his amazement, the agony in his foot did not cease and he found that he had correctly been wrenching O'Mahony's foot the wrong time, and not his own, while now O'Mahony kept on unscrewing his. It caused him to fly into a great fury and he spanked Danno with a hand like a diary lunch waffle and bounced up to snarl at the reporter.

* * *

It Served George Right

"YOU FILTHY CHEAT," HE GROWLED, "I'm going to swipe you right on the nose with this hunk of lard."

"O, but let's don't resort to reprisals, Mr. George," objected the reporter. "I really thought it was your foot."

"So, a typical reporter eh?" said George scathingly. "That's unity, coherence and emphasis for you. See if you can describe this mug as he smacks you in the face?"

George took careful aim between the reporter's ears and heaved O'Mahony directly at him. It was a wild pitch and Danno struck, instead, the face of the reporter from the Brockton Enterprise, who was entirely guiltless. Ten times more George tried to take vengeance on the reporter, who dodged under the press shelf at every heave, and ten times O'Mahony tangled in the ring strands or splashed among the customers, who began to shout for a new pitcher.

So it was evident after George pitched the equivalent of four bases on balls that his control was bad, although he had a nice change of pace. And just when the producer of the match, Mr. Paul Bowser, was ready to warm up a new pitcher Danno sneaked around and clutched George from behind so that he went down in a big clattering run. And everybody said it served George right for losing his temper.

It seems possible that something repetitious is apt to occur tonight after all the cross things Danno and Steve have been saying in the papers. Wouldn't it be odd if they both lost their tempers at once?

O'Mahoney-Casey Match a Tossup

Danno vs. Steve Tonight, and Irish Title Is at Stake

Danno still relies on his Irish Whip which he demonstrates above. He believes it will be enough to take care of Steve Casey at Fenway Park tonight.

"I saw McCoy against Nate Brown and I'm convinced I can whip him," said Roxbury Jack today.

"In my opinion, McCoy is overrated. He's just plenty of speed and fire since packing on the extra weight to become a beast, and what good is his punch if he isn't fast enough to connect with it?

From McCarthy's pieces reports have a smarter, cleaner thinking boxer than when Lester last saw him. Associated with the ex-champion and other ring notables has brought about a change in McCoy.

It has been said long the Comiskey, boss said when Lewis won the title McCarthy took on Bernie Lowmer spotted the 225 pound grappler 35 pounds and gave him a solid beating.

Hearst Regatta Lures California, New Orleans Represented in Basin

From as far away as California, from Florida and New Orleans, are headed the world's greatest outboard motorboat speed pilots converging on Boston for the annual Hearst Regatta on the Charles River August 7 and 8.

Some of the competitors will be equipped with the costliest of motor jobs, the finest mahogany hulls.

Others, with equal chances, will boast home made jobs, product of their own manufacture, with a picked-up part here and another there, so that in the end they may boast as fine a finished product as the millionaire's son who may have the next starting berth.

The entire fleet is looking for and will get the best competition in the history of the water sport.

DANNO, Casey Go TOSSUP

Dan O'Mahony against Steve Casey!

It is the top mat attraction of the year, and it is expected that a large crowd will turn Tom Yawkey's baseball orchard when Danno and Steve clash in the Battle of the Irishmen.

Then there are the [illegible] events [illegible] wrestling fans [illegible] outside the [illegible] between [illegible] Sam Smith and Casey as the referee and [illegible] Burbank as [illegible] official.

Along with the [illegible] of [illegible] there will be at Fenway Park tonight touring for action and [illegible] will [illegible] with man wins.

O'Mahony and Casey are in perfect condition. Each has come through strenuous training sessions unmarked. Neither has an ounce of superfluous weight to tip the ring.

The winner will be in line for a bout with Yvon Robert, the champion. I think either O'Mahony or Casey would be a cinch to win from Robert.

Zevanaid, Bob C., Count Me Other Good Horses

By DAVE WILSON

BEST BET—Appealing, 5th Race

Sofffolk Downs, July 20—Motor City Stable's Appealing, dead short third to Zoic and Trouper in last race, apparently needs only to put forth expected improvement to lead less capable opposition under the wire in the $1200 Algonquin Purse, six furlongs feature here today.

FIRST — Lord Tournament, Winter Sport, Many Moons

Although swapping no severe rungs on the class ladder, LORD TOURNAMENT which easily triumphed over less-capable opposition, on a muddy track the other day, looms as a likely repeater. WINTER SPORT a mud specialist, captured his second straight victory over the slop route in the previous effort, should prove difficult to crowd out of the picture

THIRD—Mr. Count, Hoursend, Bug Prince

Although on the slow side in two outings, WILD COUNT as a sire's son should be good enough in the local competition to be accorded a wide selection with this cheap foe. HOURSEND, sharp in his last start, may dash danger, with BUSY PRINCE next in order

FOURTH—Bob C., Grand Light, Landlubber

BOB C. which ran second to less capable opponents in his last start, figures to be a tough one to beat. Despite getting the afternoon's hottest pace, he ended GRAND LIGHT, come up in the stretch recent endeavors, but was enough to save a place from LAND LUBBER.

FIFTH—Appealing, Noel H, Party Spirit

If anything leads APPEALING past the wire, it will likely be NOEL H PARTY SPIRIT should improve enough to save show honors.

SIXTH—Sipantuck, Swiftlet, Chambersburger

SIPANTUCK, winner of two straight races, is meeting little more than he drubbed in his last effort over the local track. CHAMBERSBURGER, which was beaten the narrowest of margins by the top select, at Saratoga seems a likely danger. CHAMBERSBURGER, on recent form, should prove difficult to crowd out of the picture

SEVENTH—Count Me, Oddesa Boy, Dizzy B.

Although finishing far back in the rear in his last race COUNT ME proved notice in that affair that he would be hard to crack in this event. Under actual handing ODDESA BOY, which was weakly ridden in last race may prove a real threat but not to crack. DIZZY B. shapes up next best.

EIGHTH—Candimate, Grey Shot, Madwind

After many failures, CANDIMATE a one-time a-ke performer, finally drops into a spot where he needs only to stand up in order to insure brackets. GREY SHOT, second to Imperial Rose in last race looms as the only danger. MADWIND for third honors

Cauld Kail Rated Best at Taunton

By MAT KEANEY

BEST—CAULD KAIL IN NINTH

Taunton, July 20—For the second Gold Collar elimination race I am taking Cauld Kail to win all of it and at the same time making the only best bet of the night at the Taunton dog track.

This one won its elimination heat in the Sportsmen's derby and should repeat that triumph here though the contention may be a trifle better.

The first four dogs to finish tonight go into the Gold Collar final which is to be run on Thursday night, the halfway mark in the Bristol County Kennel Club meeting

Court Jester Ruling Dog at Revere Oval

By SAM COHEN

BEST BET—COURT JESTER, EIGHTH

Court Jester, despite his miserable disappointment last out, is still the top dog at Wonderland Park and easily figures best in the eighth race feature tonight and also the top choice on the card.

A 3 to 5 favorite last out in a driving finish from the Jester was unable to do anything in the mud but given normal running conditions tonight he figures to come home nearly a length in front.

FIRST RACE—FUTURITY

ENTOMOLOGY AT WOODLAND

By BILL GRIMES

In consequence of a scare incited by erroneous announcements in the public press by a couple of golf scriveners (who have apparently neglected their entomology) to the effect that the deadly Japanese beetles were invading local courses, particularly Brae Burn, the annual Pro-Greenskeepers Tournament for the John Shanahan Trophy, which was played at Woodland and won by Harold "Jug" McSpaden and Lester Wildgust, Winchester, was little short of a burlesque.

The pros played for a watch, but the greenskeepers took handicaps of from 0 to 36 and were allowed three-quarters of the strokes on hand.

With Wildgust who designed a pin at the Carr's Corners Club at Lebanon, N. H., as the prize, and a 36-stroke handicap the Winchester pro grossed an 81-81—162 and wound up with a net 90.

It seems that the committee, which was comprised wholly of greenskeepers, was so much concerned over the Japanese beetle rumors that it handicapped the field on a match, instead of a medal, play basis.

Out of a field of 45 competitors all but eight of those who put in with handicaps broke 70.

ANDERSON AND WILSON

Although there were many and lengthy arguments about the handicaps, the chief topic was the erroneous stories concerning the Japanese beetles. And when the greenskeepers get themselves stirred on entomology would respect Latin names.

The last [illegible] that Japanese beetle[illegible] were conspicuous only by their absence. And I had the misfortune of being the innocent by-stander, who was riddled with an avalanche of entomological data, of both the book and live variety.

I've never harbored ever [illegible] the slightest interest in the [illegible] Scarabaeidae. Therefore the greenskeepers wasted considerable time trying to distinguish, for my benefit, between the June, Japanese and Asiastic beetles.

While copying the scores I listened to Art Anderson, Brae Burn and Frank Wilson, Charles River, who appeared to be the spokesmen for the greenskeepers describe the various types of beetles.

About all I gathered from their lecture was that the greenskeepers desired a public denial that there are any Japanese beetles in this section.

But, while showing me a collection of live Asiatics [illegible] which he carried around in his coat pocket as though they were candy drops, Anderson produced a couple of genuine Japanese beetles which he declared were found in Brookline.

Entomology is all Greek to me but I'll wager with any golfer or bet that Brookline is the second.

BLOWN ONTO COURSES

Then I was informed that it was the Asiaticus Cognitus that [illegible] to you and me [illegible] had invaded Brae Burn to such an extent as to cause the Invitation Pro-Am Tourney [illegible] to Woodland.

They are prevalent in New England New York New Jersey and Pennsylvania. Good pro-greenskeepers [illegible] winter when warm [illegible] and were blown on the [illegible] from marsh grass.

Unlike the Japanese beetles, which are back this year in three-quarters the normal length when they do [illegible] damage, they are red headed and change from white to tan and [illegible] back.

Well, all are [illegible] the greenskeepers [illegible] that they're not Japanese beetles if you take the word of Art Anderson and Frank Wilson.

Nippon Threat To U. S. Stars

The Longwood Bowl women's singles championships which open today have a decided international flavor with the entry of Mrs. Takuko Makano, above, from far off Japan. She is singles champion in her native land and has been women's singles champion of Hawaii for the last nine years.

Nippon Net Queen

Nine Times Hawaii Champ

So that the records may be straight, let's get in agreement with Mrs. Takuko M. Nakano, Japan's representative in the Longwood Bowl women's play, when she states that she is NOT the wife of Fumiteru Nakano, Japanese Davis Cup star.

"Wherever I go, it is a mistaken impression that I'm Fumiteru's wife," Mrs. Nakano relates in the finest of English. "Therefore they all expect me to be an equally great woman player."

[illegible] past 13 years. In that time she has been her country's [illegible]

"While swimming and baseball are our most popular sports in Japan," she states, "tennis is coming fast. We have almost as many public courts as you have over here.

"We are blessed with wonderful weather. We can play tennis the year round. We have very few grass courts there, mostly a clay surface. But they are very fine.

"I go to not only those of the mound classes but enjoy the game. But now with the many new courts springing up, the way is being paved for those of modest circumstances to take it up.

"So that Japan should eventually develop into a formidable tennis country."

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

A Nationwide Organization Devoted To American Youth in Aviation

By L. F. ROSS
Boston Wing Commander

With the end of the contest in sight, Junior Birdmen contestants in the national membership campaign, are redoubling their efforts to win the 17 major awards and the 10,000 other prizes that will go to winners.

The competition closes next Sunday midnight and each contestant who enrolls boys and girls in the organization this week will receive one point for each applicant.

Some of the contestants are making an extra fine showing. These include Melvin Hookailo of West Newton, "Bill" Briggs of Brighton, Paul W. Brauer, Jamaica Plain; "Bob" Cheney, Waltham, Virginia Marr, Milton, and William Christiansen, Medford.

This doesn't mean that one of the above contestants will win. It simply means their known scores put them in the running. Quite a number of boys and girls are working industriously getting new members but have so far failed to report their points.

Thus it is possible for a contestant to appear late in the week with a raft of new members and earn off the high honors.

Throughout the country Junior Birdmen are actively soliciting their friends to join in the hope of winning the major awards.

The first of these is the three weeks' vacation cruise through the Panama Canal in which a parent or an adult friend may accompany the winner. The two will leave from New York on the steamer California of the Panama Pacific line, cruise to Havana, through the Panama Canal and up along the Mexican coast to Los Angeles, where they will board a mainliner of the United Air Lines for the flight back home.

Sixteen other awards are transcontinental flights in mainliners to Hollywood and New York, with three days of unforgettable sightseeing in each city. West coast winners will fly to New York, and east coast winners, including the New England victor (if he or she doesn't win the three weeks' cruise), will fly to Hollywood.

It is not too late for other members to join this contest. The issue is still in doubt and anyone has a chance to win one of the major awards.

Every member who turns in 100 points or more will receive a complete set of Junior Birdmen handbooks, including the de luxe dictionary and a Junior Birdmen sweater emblem.

Every member who turns in 75 points or more will receive the first 10 handbooks, including standard dictionary (not de luxe) and a Junior Birdmen sweater emblem.

Every member who turns in 10 points or more will receive a standard aviation dictionary and a Junior Birdmen sweater emblem.

Radioland Reflections

By M. E. M.

(While N. F. T. is vacationing)

TO swing or not to swing, that is the question this evening on the "Swing School" broadcast at 9:30 p. m. (WEEI).

Armed to the teeth with tomahawk and chain-mailed suit, Chester Rugg is says he has found a new diversion in life in relation to his comedy and dog hospital operations; that is, swinging.

PET PEEVES

Radio boards who have wives who care too orderly for mice and mice and other such domestic pets of the house Sidney Brown and Allie Lowe Miles have put suggestions tonight at 8 p. m. (WBZ). Their programme to Mrs. Miles, interviewed concerning arguments which she can for days and days is the result that is spicy of these days.

Anxious for impromptu repartee Brown and Miles have invited both Ben Bernie and Milton Berle should provide a subject of dispute this evening at 9 p. m. (WBZ). Bernie is Ben's guest for the broadcast and the combination promises much for a match of wits. Milton Berle recently won the press "New Faces of 1937" and Ben Bernie's "Wake Up and Live" are both playing Keith-Albee vaudeville throughout the country.

SUCCESSFUL SURPRISE

A man whose birth is so humble that even he has never learned exactly when it happened will be guest of Edgar A. Guest at 8:30 p. m. (WBZ) tonight during the "It Can Be Done" program Dr. George Washington Carver, who as a child of slave parents was once traded for a horse, is now one of the nation's foremost agricultural scientists. Today, he has developed more than 300 commercial uses for products developed from the peanut and 118 for products developed from the sweet potato. He has also created other products grown in the South. He also has developed a dye made from Southern clay.

ECONOMIC ENTERTAINMENT

Again Edward Tomlinson presents a well-known figure of the press on his "The Other American" broadcast at 10 p. m. (WBZ) Summer Weeks, United States Under secretary of State has long been in intimate touch with affairs in the 20 republics to the south of the United States. Carlos Morales distinguished Cuban baritone and member of the Metropolitan Opera Company and Juan Manrique Guarnieri Uruguayan guitarist will be the soloists of the musical portion of the program. Joseph Littau will conduct the orchestra in selections typical of various South American countries.

Brightly abetting the foreign element of tomorrow's radio programme, Mrs Ruth Bryan Rhode former minister to Denmark, will speak at 4:30 p. m. (WNAC). The Danish American Women's Association has elected her as its new honorary president and she will attend a reception in her honor. Mrs. Rohde is the daughter of the great Illinois William Jennings Bryan.

Just a crooning companion to the guest of honor Grace Moore, that young songbird presents the world premiere of music from Mary Livingstone's first motion picture, "This Way Please," tonight at 9 p. m. (WNAC). John Scott Trotter's orchestra will play the Jack Benny program a week early, playing the songs as a special feature to Mary Jack and his talented wife will listen to the program on the big seas They will be en route to London aboard the Normandie when the program is broadcast.

NEWS NOTE.

Although it was announced that Lowell Thomas on behalf of the Literary Broadcast was to appear at 2:15 p. m. (WEEI) had to cancel his appearance. Thomas was selected by no less an authority than Josef Hofmann. When the war ends a little while after the great pianist before a packed concrete Hofmann quickly put on her and refused to answer pressing requests with the Paderewski. A good pan when she gave a concert he said "Let your pores to your fingers first to see how they like it. Then after try them on the public."

BOSTON after DARK

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Down by the sad sea waves at Nantasket there's a gentleman who's even sadder—and this gentleman is sad because he's in a very perplexing spot indeed. . .Some time ago, being of a commercial and sporting mind at once, he opened a spot and let it be whispered cozily around and about that he'd be happy to accept various and sundry wages on the relative speeds of hosses and the like . . .

Well, things went along not too badly until the law got wind of these doings and began putting on the heat. . .Customers who do not relish heat in such a fashion, dropped off and scattered to other spots willing to accept wagers on speed, and here was a gentleman with a nice parlor but no business. . . .

But four lads working for him finally had an idea. . .They would start playing the rags, if only to give the hose a clean-up. They've cheered him up so much that now they owe him six weeks' pay. . . However, realizing that his workers had to eat and board, the host has continued paying them. . .But now, tired of it all, he's issued a ukase, "No more owesies,"—and he's sad again . . .

'California' Film Epic In 1939

By HARRIET PARSONS

(Copyright, 1937, by Universal Service)

Los Angeles, July 20—Looks as if the studios are trying to outdo one another in announcing spectacular all-star casts for future productions.

Yesterday we gave you the million dollar lineup for M-G-M's "Ivanhoe." Now comes Walter Wanger with "California," in which his entire roster of contract stars will appear. Ronald Reagan will be teamed for the first time with Charles Boyer, Madeleine Carroll, Sylvia Sidney, Joan Bennett and Henry Fonda, and in addition Wanger will borrow other top-ranking stars.

Harriet Parsons Jones, a native Californian, has been five years gathering the material for this epic, which will depict the rise of the Golden State from the days of the padres. Wanger also has been another year to write the screen play and has scheduled the Technicolor spectacle for 1939 release. Climax will be the San Francisco World Fair of 1939.

"Merry, Merry Maiden," a new novel by Helen Grace Carlisle shortly to appear in Cosmopolitan Magazine, has just been bought by David Selznick from the galley proofs. Story has to do with four girls who go through high school and college together, later marry and all have daughters.

For star spots Selznick figures on Carole Lombard, Janet Gaynor and Doug Fairbanks, Jr., all of whom have commitments with him. George Cukor will direct this one before he megs the by-now-almost legendary "Gone With the Wind."

Not only is poor little Freddie Bartholomew embroiled at the moment in legal difficulties which he is now out all his savings, but he is also having salary trouble with M-G-M. Freddie is undoubtedly one of Metro's most valuable properties since his magnificent performance in "Captains Courageous" which has been acclaimed a terrific sum and ranks third among M-G-M's all-time box office highs.

Studio is preparing "Kim" for Bartholomew to follow up "Courageous" and without question some sort of financial adjustment will be reached.

Line or two: Dick Baldwin, six foot stage actor, hitherto confined to minor roles in quickies, gets the romantic lead in Twenti-Cent-Fox "Life Begins at College," featuring the Ritz brothers, Dixie Dunbar, Gloria Stuart, Joan Marsh and Joan Davis. Zanuck handed him the part after one test—and he's still dizzy . . .

For the third successive time Norma Shearer has been voted tops in popularity in a survey of British movie-goers conducted every three years by England's largest theater chain . . . Philip Ray, who's been touring with Tallulah Bankhead in "Reflected Glory," is back in Hollywood and goes to Metro for the role of Jacques in "Madame X."

Snapshots of Hollywood

MRS. FRED NOONAN, married only a few months to AMELIA EARHART'S navigator, quietly becoming wife of GAIL PATRICK. Nobody knows she's in town because she's too distressed right now to give any interviews; GRACE MOORE and VALENTIN PARERA trailering at Lake Arrowhead over their anniversary. VALENTIN picked a parking spot and when GRACE raved about the beauty he handed her the deed to the property; FRED STONE'S vivid pink shirt almost stopping traffic on Wilshire blvd.

SPENCER TRACY heading for Honolulu to join the wife and two kids as soon as he finishes "Big City"; EDNA MAY OLIVER spending a day in the beauty parlor bleaching out the dire results of a snooze in the sun; LEAH RAY squawking that she'll linger a little longer in her home town in Virginia. Hear tell that sweetheart DOLORES DEL RIO of late has something to do with it; HILDA VAUGHAN who just can't stay away from Hollywood; the general anaesthetic to have some teeth filled. That's all today. I'm going home and take an anaesthetic myself.

Universal's hilarious farce comedy, "Love in a Bungalow," a gay story of the adventures of the heiress of a model home, co-featured Nan Grey and Robert Paige, thrill-packed romance featuring Lyle Talbot and Wendy Barrie comprise the new double feature bill opening at the RKO Boston theater on Friday.

Nan Grey portrays the hostess in "Love in a Bungalow" and, opposite her, Kent Taylor enacts the role of an unemployed super-salesman who usurps the best bedroom of Nan's model house.

As a lark, Nan and Kent write a radio contest letter telling why they are the most happily married couple in the world, despite the fact that they aren't married at all. Hilarious complications set in when they win the contest and must produce a home and children which they described in their letter.

"What Price Vengeance" is jam-packed with action and romance. It is the tale of a young, handsome policeman, publically disgraced and discharged from the force for cowardice and failure in an emergency. The policeman joins forces with a gang of desperate killers, planning to help them rob a warehouse.

But the gang does not know that the ex-cop has secretly relayed information of the projected robbery to the police, through his loyal sweetheart.

STAR IN ROMANTIC COMEDY

Martha ("Magnavox") Raye arrives in town on Thursday to headline the new stage bill at the Metropolitan, after breaking box-office records at New York's Paramount theater. Shirley Temple's latest film, "Wee Willie Winkie" will be the screen attraction.

Marion Davies plays the role of secretary to Author Robert Montgomery in "Ever Since Eve", romantic comedy which opens at the Paramount and Fenway on Thursday. Above scene from the film shows them discussing a novel Montgomery has been engaged to write.

Gene Raymond At Olympia

Gene Raymond and Ann Sothern, in a romantic drama of newspaper story, "There Goes My Girl," and little Jane Withers, doubling as a sleuth in "Angel's Holiday," are the attractions at Washington Street Olympia, commencing tomorrow.

"There Goes My Girl" recounts the exciting adventures of two romantic but rival newspaper reporters who combine forces with the police in the solution of a baffling murder mystery. The companion feature, "Angel's Holiday," is a thrilling story of kidnapers, screen stars, newspaper reporters, private eyes, all brought together and satisfied into action by energetic Miss Withers.

'Ever Since Eve' Premiere On Twin Bills Thursday

Cosmopolitan's much anticipated comedy production, "Ever Since Eve," co-starring Robert Montgomery and Marion Davies, will have its initial Hub showing at the Paramount and Fenway Theaters beginning Thursday.

Coupled with the feature attraction is "The Case of the Stuttering Bishop," mystery drama, co-starring Donald Woods and Ann Dvorak.

"Ever Since Eve" is a gay, fast-moving romantic comedy with two topnotch stars, supported by a host of stellar comedians, promises to be one of the most entertaining laugh hits of the season.

It is the story of a handsome young author, whose hard-boiled publisher forces him to accept a secretary who deliberately makes herself unattractive to escape the inevitable attentions of amorous employers. When the author meets his secretary sans disguise, he fails to recognize her, promptly falls in love with her and the ensuing complications become fast and furious.

Robert Montgomery as the author and Marion Davies as his secretary are supported by an excellent cast headed by Louise Fazenda, Allen Jenkins, Patsy Kelly, Frank McHugh and Marcia Ralston.

"The Case of the Stuttering Bishop," latest in Earle Stanley Gardner's popular Perry Mason series of stories, draws the lawyer detective and his beautiful young assistant into the most baffling murder history of their careers.

Martha Raye On Met Bill Thursday

The marvel of Hollywood used to be that a girl as attractive as Martha Raye was willing to distort her face as that, outside of Joe E. Brown, her mouth is the most fatiguing in the world.

But, since Miss Raye has become the screen's foremost comedienne and a wrecker of box-office records wherever she personal appearances it's as plain as the nose on W. C. Fields' face that Raye's wry kisser is her fortune. And the Hollywood breeder who have had to be content with extra jobs are beginning to take heed.

Fresh from New York's Paramount where she topped Benny Goodman's record for opening day, Miss Raye comes to the Met on Thursday. She will share honors with the new Shirley Temple picture, "Wee Willie Winkie," adapted from the Rudyard Kipling classic.

• • •

Martha Raye at twenty is today the screen's foremost comedienne. Exactly twenty of her twenty years have been spent on the stage, Miss Raye claims. She was born in a dressing room in Butte, Montana, the daughter of a vaudeville team billed as Reid and Cooper. She learned with her parents until 13, then left to work in Chicago night clubs. Since she has appeared in clubs along Broadway and in Hollywood.

Now Raye, really attractive in an usual sort of way, claims that her face is the funniest in the world and has a mouth so large that it makes a piker out of Joe E. Brown. Certainly, it is more gymnastic than any other mouth of moviedom—it constantly wanders about her face.

Her night club engagements Miss Raye went to the Loew circuit with her vaudeville act, then earned spots in Calling All Stars, a popular Broadway musical which opened in Boston—and Earl Carroll's Sketchbook. She got her big engagement to have a trial at the movies.

• • •

Her first picture was "Rhythm On the Range," for which she was signed by Paramount after working on in a Hollywood night club. Since that time she has appeared in "The Big Broadcast of 1937," "Hideaway Girl," "Waikiki Wedding," "College Holiday" and "Mountain Music." Dynamite action, insane lines, a voice somewhat like a fog horn are her best stock in trade, and with these she brings an entirely fresh type of humor to the stage and screen.

Just six weeks ago Martha was married to Buddy Westmore, popular young Hollywood make-up artist.

Martha Raye's Wedding Is Set for Tuesday

Hollywood, July 20—Martha Raye, comedienne, and Buddy Westmore, make-up artist, will be married Tuesday, it was announced today.

Miss Raye, who is appearing at the Metropolitan theater in Boston, will fly to Reno tomorrow. Westmore will follow her there.

Coward Play on Cape

Dennis, July 20—Noel Coward's "Tonight at 8:30" one of the outstanding hits of Boston's winter season, had its summer theater debut at least as far as the New England playhouses are concerned last evening at the Cape Playhouse, with Doris Nolan and Philip Huston in the leading roles.

The production has been staged by Arthur Sircom with amazing smoothness and dexterity. "Ways and Means," "Still Life" and "Hands Across the Sea" are the three short plays on the bill and they are given in that order.

Without attempting to anglicize their English theatrical personalities, Miss Nolan and Huston give surprisingly good account of themselves both in the two comedies and in "Still Life," in which both players succeeded in catching the tense, implied emotionalism with which the author writes with such brilliance.

WORLD PREMIERE

"Prejudice" Delights Cape Audience At Mary Young Theater

By PEGGY DOYLE

Centerville, July 20—Edgar Selwyn's new play, "Prejudice," which had its world premiere here last night at the Mary Young theater, takes Fuehrer-leader Hitler's celebrated monomania right into the parlor and makes it pretty absorbing theater.

The parlor (or does that date us?), the drawing room, then, is that of the socially prominent Whitridges of Long Island, and against the background of its correct appointments life happens, and constantly.

The Whitridge daughter, a petulant, spoiled darling, is in the throes of a love affair with Tom Marshall, thoroughly attractive but definitely married and to a woman who refuses to relinquish him.

Mama and Papa Whitridge, as futile a pair of parents as you'll ever find on either side of the footlights, are at the floor-walking, hand-wringing state when the former is inspired to seek the intervention of the girl's adored grandmother, the very wealthy Mrs. Cynthia Brooks.

• • •

Mrs. Brooks, deep in a stocks-and-bond conference with her financial adviser, when reached on the telephone, insists on bringing him, a Mr. Len Erlich with her. His arrival with her grandmother reveals the girl's deep antipathy to him, an antipathy that has carried on since her childhood and which she cannot explain but can only attribute to racial prejudice.

Eleanor King, who plays pert, pretty Judith Whitridge, makes her an entirely credible young thing, irresponsible, self-willed in fact. As having her way at whatever cost. Mrs. Brooks, a forceful, spirited, modern grandmother as Mary Buckley plays her, skips all the well-meaning but pointless arguments her daughter uses and blandly informs Judy that she is to be her heir and not to be a silly little fool.

"You will have responsibilities, my dear," she urges, "grave responsibilities. You will have great wealth, remember that."

Abruptly Judy decides to forego the favors of marriage with the approved Donald Hastings, who has been proposing unsuccessfully for years.

Believed the Whitridges stage a dinner party to celebrate the felicitous event. All is proceeding smoothly, not to say gayly, when Judy, amazed at Erlich's offer of a junior partnership to her father, insultingly spurns both Erlich and his kindness.

• • •

Her witless mother, angered beyond all restraint, blurts out the shocking fact that Judy is insulting her own father. Judy's world comes tumbling down at the startling information.

This second-act curtain is the meat of the play, which, ending with a powerful and universally interesting theme, loses in force in its third act.

Miss King, whose had some movie and stage experience, is excellent as Judy. She should be going places and don't forget we told you. (Where have we heard that before?) Youthful Carlyle Moore, Jr., is completely natural and likable as Don Hastings. William P. Carleton, as the ineffective Hunter Whitridge, Judy's father, is just that and topping.

Mary Young, as his wife, couldn't be better, particularly in the scene where she makes the revelation that topples all her plans for her lovely daughter.

The necessary light touch that May Buckley, as the elderly Mrs. Brooks, who won't act her age maintained throughout is great. What Doctor Selwyn, absent in Hollywood about his directorial duties, might have ordered.

FINANCE FIRMS FORM MERGER

Announcement was made today that Industrial Bankers, widely known personal finance institution with offices in 35 Massachusetts cities and towns, and New England Equity, with offices in nine, will be known hereafter as the Personal Finance Company.

According to Roy V. Shorey, manager of Industrial Bankers Boston office at 73 Tremont street, the move will give more personal attention, greater convenience and increased financial assistance to wage earners not having access to ordinary bank credit.

There will be no change in management or the business of either organization and in each of the 44 offices the entire staffs will remain intact.

Frank Monroe Dead

Get Keyhole View Of Court Issue

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

If you examine that fight over the Supreme Court you will discover it's like looking through a keyhole into an empty house.

There's nothing much inside the affair. It seems to us that the whole thing is a political cuttlefish beclouding itself in its own issue.

In the meantime the real important question is always shoving up in back of the Supreme Court argument. Maybe we are wrong about it, but the whole argument is so silly that we can't even waste a paper hat on it.

The writer may not be the smartest bird in the world about politics, but he does know enough to grab a hot frying pan by the handle.

Body Found in Harbor

The body of an unidentified man, about 40, and clad in dungarees, was discovered in Boston Harbor, off the Army Base, South Boston, today by two army engineers.

Walsh's Tax Plan Sound

THE BILL introduced by Senator Walsh of Massachusetts to permit the filing of individual Federal income tax returns without the formality of an oath is a move in the right direction.

Such a change in both Federal and state laws would be a convenience, as well as a MONEY SAVER, to literally millions of taxpayers.

According to Senator Walsh, the Treasury Department is contemplating presentation to Congress of a similar bill covering returns filed by employers and employes under the Social Security Law.

THE WALSH bill provides that the individual taxpayer who knowingly makes a false statement in his return will be GUILTY OF PERJURY and may be prosecuted for perjury

The system he proposes has been used in connection with individual tax returns in Massachusetts for a number of years. It is just as EFFECTIVE as requiring each taxpayer to take an oath to the correctness of his return. And it saves him the TROUBLE AND EXPENSE of having his signature witnessed by a notary public.

IT SHOULD make no difference to the government whether an individual swears that his tax return is correct, as long as he can be PROSECUTED if he knowingly makes a FALSE STATEMENT. All the government is interested in is getting a correct return or being able to prosecute those who file false returns.

Perjury is a sort of MANUFACTURED CRIME, anyway. A false statement made knowingly, even though it is not sworn to, can be made perjury just as much as such a statement that is given under oath.

In view of the enormous increase in tax returns, etc., which are being required from citizens, government should make the filing of these returns AS EASY and AS INEXPENSIVE AS POSSIBLE.

Scrap Metal Exports

FOR months ships sailing from the Port of Boston have been loaded with scrap iron consigned to foreign nations. New England dumps and metal yards have been cleaned bare of discarded iron and steel. All of this has ultimately found its way into shipping channels.

Exports of scrap iron and steel continue to soar. For the third successive month exports of scrap iron and steel have exceeded all previous records. In March the United States exported 355,979 tons; in April, 421,383 tons, and in May 630,671 tons. The exports for May alone were in excess of the average annual exports for the past eleven years. Not only is this drain on our natural resources continuing, but it is growing with leaps and bounds.

Foreign nations are helping themselves to our natural resources to manufacture armaments and, in the case of Japan, to produce steel with an eight cent labor rate as against a labor cost in American mills of ten times this amount.

If present exports continue unabated, Japan alone will take two million tons of scrap to convert into munitions of war and to manufacture at an absurdly low labor rate products that will be reexported to this country at a lower cost than they can be produced here.

A bill is now before the United States military affairs committee, known as the Schwellenbach - Koppleman act, to license the export of scrap iron and steel and, while permitting a normal flow of this material, cutting it down when abnormal exports indicate a threatening situation.

Turn on Your Power

CULTIVATE POWER. You are a POWER HOUSE. Use every power gadget in you. Health is power.

Books are power. Self-will is power. Imagination is power. Reason is power. Sex is power. Love is power. Kindness is power. Hatred of tyranny is power.

No one can exhaust the possibilities of POWER in him. This power is the basic fact of the universe. We say "When our powers decline we are getting old." Herein we often pay a delayed tribute to POWER.

There is hardly anything you want that you cannot have if you arouse yourself out of your inertia and turn on the POWER in you.

That which enslaves us all and causes so many failures in life is mental and physical laziness—INERTIA. Stamp on it!

A Merited Promotion

A MERITED promotion was made by the State Department when Eric C. Wendelin of Quincy, third secretary of the American Embassy at Madrid, was given the assignment to handle the Spanish division at Washington.

For more than a year Wendelin has covered himself with glory in strife-ridden Spain. As bombs rained down on war-torn Madrid he was responsible for protecting lives and property.

This 32-year-old Milford, N. H., born envoy, who became a Quincy resident in 1917, conducted a large delegation of Americans from Madrid to safety. Although he faced many hardships Wendelin always performed his tasks with credit to himself and to his nation.

He will have ample opportunity in his new berth to win new laurels.

Take Life Easy

THE mercury has played some curious pranks with New England in the last two weeks. Here in Boston it shot up to a record for the summer of 99 degrees and then took a tailspin to the lower fifties for an all time record July figure.

With a new upward surge predicted there is only one recourse for humanity—GRIN AND BEAR IT.

When heat and humidity trouble you, forget all about the time-honored saying, "Never put off until tomorrow what you can do today."

Proverbs are well enough in spring, autumn and winter, but they are misfits when the temperature spurts upward.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, July 20—In New York the three most pronounced of the species the world calls sophisticates are Noel Coward, Dorothy Parker and Alexander Woollcott. Whatever they say is hailed as fearfully cutting, or definitely, and devastatingly mirthful, no end. Often to be retold in whispers.

O. O. McIntyre

For many years the hotbed of sophistication was Frank Case's Algonquin, and touches of it still linger there, but its clientele has changed to a more settled crowd for whom razoring inoffensives is not so much fun. There are more of the philosophers there now, such as Hendrik Van Loon.

The fire-cracker mote now explode chiefly at that plutocratic phenomenon out of the speakeasy peep hole days of prohibition called "No. 21." Here artists for Esquire and The New Yorker's Peter Arno seem to find much material for the bold swipes at the brunettes of the day.

The so-called "sophisticated stuff" appeals to a limited audience. It has never gone over in the movies and few stage plays have had all-season runs exploiting it. On the radio sophistication is regarded with the same sniff as smut, which is a break for those of us who like to tune in.

I met the most pronounced Gilbert and Sullivan fan, I imagine, in the world, at the Valentine Williams' recently. Only on a solemn promise not to reveal his name would he discuss his worship of this brand of musical entertainment. He is an important executive with an industrial concern and has attended more than 400 performances here and abroad and knows by heart 20 roles. Among them Strephon in "Iolanthe," Archibald in "Patience," Pish and Tush in "The Mikado." Bill Bobstay in "Pinafore" and, of course, Ko Ko and Poo-Bah. He says there are two words in Poo-Bah's song not in the dictionary, yet sounding so right no one ever questions them. They are "ablutioner" and "diminutioner."

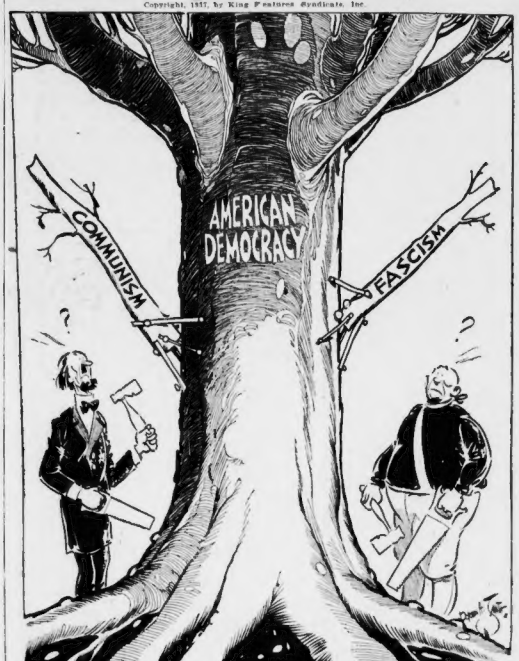
I always thought the grandest line in Gilbert and Sullivan—Poo-Bah's I think—was with a deal of pride he was touching his associates "heir to a protoplasmal primordial atomic globule." After repeating it a few times it is the purest nonsense, but off your tongue and send you skipping about the room, ta, la.

Top flight society boys and girls a shade zeroish in family exchequer are angling for jobs in swank inns and hoteldom has found they are of value. A notable contribution has been Serge Obolensky, who at the request of his one-time brother-in-law, Vincent Astor, the owner, became the social arbiter of the St. Regis and did an amazing job of revivifying that hostelry. The St. Regis was an old-timer and becoming slightly passe when Obolensky began to wave the social wand. Receptions over the Ritz Carlton, owned by the socially-minded Robert Goelet and directed by Albert Keller, added to Obolensky's luster. Another, whose hobby has been society and who has now become a director of that inn, is the Ritz. It out to keep the lead always enjoyed. It is rumored that Grand Duchess Marie of Russia has been offered the social hostessship of one of the small but exclusive inns on the upper East Side. It has been proved that in hotel restaurant patronage if an accomplished bell wether can be secured the sheep will come tumbling after.

There's no stretch in the world so awash with mawkish sentimentality as Broadway. It will always ring the welkin for one who has come back. Broadwaylets live generally on the edge of the volcano and to vanish and return smiling proves there is always a chance. A new target for the Broadway saliva is Joe Lewis, a cabaret comedian out of Chicago, a mime indeed with a tragic past. Gangsters took him for a ride one night, mutilating him horribly and left him for dead along the roadside. He made a slow, gallant recovery in three years, having to learn to walk and talk again. Today he is a sure fire show-stopper. Among other some-backs who have filled the pleasure halls this summer were Eddie Leonard, Joe Howard, Ann Pennington and Jack Osterman.

I never approach a soda fountain without the resurging of a secret unfilled hope the jerker will add an extra scoop of ice cream just for good measure. I suppose if under pressure, I could pay for the extra blob, but that would shatter the dream of years. It must be the gratuitous gesture of suddenly inspired fellowship. It may never develop but I go on hoping and hoping.

Incompatible Grafting



Copyright, 1937, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

During a century and a half American democracy has grown as a mighty oak which tempests may shake but cannot strike down.

Senator Borah protested some days ago against propaganda which seeks to graft a Fascist system upon the tree of democracy.

Other voices have repeatedly exposed the propaganda which seeks to fasten Bolshevist branches upon the tree.

Either of these foreign growths, were it to be grafted upon the tree, would act as a killing blight.

But that does not mean that the tree of democracy must not be guarded.

Every American who has enjoyed its shelter should be continually on watch as a loyal sentinel.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

What this country needs is a brand-new technique for handing HOODLUMS—and I don't mean maybe!

Elsie Robinson

Why did I write that? Because hundreds and ninety-six letters are why. Shouting-mad letters from incensed citizens, telling what happened to them, and in inch of room or a can of tomato juice to spare, it's what you can join in the chorus. For the hoodlums were out—and how.

They didn't, of course, call themselves Hoodlums. Or dream that anyone considered them as such. They were The Good Old Gang. Pals . . . neighbors . . . workers in the same shop or office . . . and hordes of blood kin. But they acted like Hoodlums, nevertheless . . . and they ate like hoodlums . . . and they told Hoodlum stories . . . and they left Hoodlum wreckage in their wake. And the fed-up citizens are wondering what they can do about it all—"without, of course, hurting their feelings."

Time was, in this country, when a Hoodlum was a Hoodlum. You wouldn't, by any possibility, mistake a Hoodlum for a respectable citizen, and it was unthinkable that he should enter your home.

RECOGNIZED BY ALL

He was a marked man and he knew it. He knew that Hoodlum and spoke like a Hoodlum and kept his Hoodlum place. And everyone resented him for what he was and treated him accordingly.

Then came the War . . . and Prohibition . . . and Blind Pigs . . . and Rum Runners—and, somehow, things got Jazzified. Hoodlums particularly. They were, of course, still Hoodlums and acted the part, but other people seemed to forget the fact. For, before you knew it, the Hoodlums were all over the place, cluttering in Nice People's houses, wrecking Nice People's property, demoralizing Nice People's standards. And what in the world could the Nice People do about it—"without, of course, hurting their feelings"?

Lionel Barrymore played in a movie which commemorated that era. It was a powerful movie. You did not forget it easily. It told the story of a brilliant lawyer who believed in living "a free life." Which, in his case, meant being in a practically perpetual souse. During which he became quite palsy-walsy with the town's de luxe Hoodlum Number One.

FRIENDSHIP JOLTED

But this beautiful friendship received a lasting jolt when it was suddenly revealed that the Hoodlum desired to wed the Gentleman's cherished only daughter. Out of the Gentleman's drink the memory of a cleaner, prouder code leaped to life. Shocked to enraged sobriety he turned on the Hoodlum and cried:

"Once we kept things like you on the other side of the railroad track!"

Once we kept things like that on the other side of the railroad track. Now they walk into our homes uninvited . . . eat up our groceries . . . but our china we burn our linen . . . and let their Little Darlings smear jam over our newly-painted walls.

Once a Hoodlum was a hoodlum and stayed in his Hoodlum place. Now he and his Girl Friend get drunk all over our apartment while we sit back and wonder what we can do about it. Well, I, for one, know what we can do.

We can call their turn!

"ON YOUR WAY"

If people act as hoodlums, we can threat them accordingly—even though they be old friends and blood kin.

That's what our fathers did. That's how they kept their names clean, their business decent and their nation great. And that's what you and I should do today. Millions of Americans have gone Hoodlum. They have forgotten every law of decency and lost every trace of refinement. They have no more respect for other people's property and privacy than a bunch of gangsters—and their manners would make a common hog classconscious.

THEN, WE SHOULD GIVE THEM WHAT'S COMING TO THEM. We should stop considering their brazen feelings and cease being intimidated by their callous demands. And we should say, without pretense or palaver:

HERE'S YOUR HAT, HOODLUM! ON YOUR WAY!

That's That

By Bruce Gustin

According to a report from the U. S. Consul at Milan, it is estimated Italy will have to import one million tons of wheat to meet requirements in Ethiopia. But instead of sending the wheat to Ethiopia, it is expected the work of converting the wheat into flour will be given to Italian mills and Italian labor, and then the flour will be shipped to Ethiopia.

There is quite a difference between the Italian policy and the one the administration in the United States follows on sugar. Instead of insisting that sugar imports from Cuba, the Philippines and our Insular Possessions shall be in raw form so American refineries and American labor will have the work of refining them, the administration wants to increase the proportion of refined sugar imports. As long as we do not raise enough sugar in the United States to meet our requirements, it is only common sense that we should restrict our imports to raw sugar and have the refining done here at home.

The theory of Dr. Reno Paul, European allergist, that "only cultured people, in general, have hay fever and other allergic diseases" should appeal to the vanity of all who are so afflicted. If they cannot find any relief from their ailment, they at least may console themselves with the thought that it is one of the penalties of "culture." But they will lose that consolation if they try to figure out any common sense reason why only the "cultured" should be susceptible to hay fever. The pollen from weeds and plants does not select the nostrils it enters and there is no reason why susceptibility to its irritation should vary according to "culture" of people.

What is the most fever a human can have and live? Answers to that question are being revised. A New York man, who was overcome by heat, registered a temperature of 109.8 degrees—the highest ever recorded in a human being who survived. Not many people would have survived that. But human beings differ in resistance to fever and disease as they differ in other things.

PEOPLE JUST PEOPLE—even as you and I.

Old Indian records reveal that at an election on the Sisseton (N. D.) Indian Reservation in 1887 some of the winners were Man-Who-Makes-Sneak-On-Public-Institutions, Old-Man-Who-Cusses-Without-Principle, Young-Man-With-Slight-To-Ambitions, and Man-Afraid-Of-Two-Deuces. AND THEY TELL US THE INDIANS WERE AN "UNCIVILIZED" RACE!

Buddhists in Tokyo offer up solemn prayers for the repose of the souls of 100,000 bullfrogs sacrificed in experiments on glanders. This is reasonable recognition of the fact that a bullfrog's life is quite as important to a bullfrog as a man's life is to a man.

Charles Maurras, French Royalist leader who was sent to prison for inciting to violence, in 1926 started his paper with five books and a daily article for the Royalist newspaper. L'Action Francaise. It is an idea for those authors who complain of "running dry"—TRY JAIL FOR A CHANGE!

Six thousand persons now belong to the Centenarians' Club of London. These, of course, would be pikers in the Eyes of Thomas Cam, who, according to the parish register of St. Leonard's Church, Shoreditch, England, died IN HIS 207TH YEAR.

Palestine Politics

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

Edwin C. Hill

It's worth a thought in these violent days that perhaps the conflict between the Jews and the Moslems in Palestine is of more consequence to humanity at large — of more moment to the white race and the western world —than the bitter, bloody conflict between Fascism and Radicalism now being fought out in Spain. Overt and obvious is the European strife.

A deep, unseen, galloping undertow is the momentum of Pan-Islam, growing throughout the world, as the quickened pace of the post-war years marshals East and West each to a challenge and trial of strength.

There are about 300,000,000 Moslems in the world. The British Empire, to maintain itself, must either rule them or co-operate with them. There are about 190,000,000 in the "buffer" region north of India. Unified, hostile Islam, would be perilous to England—as would be a disunited and chaotic Islam.

There are many who believe that the British Empire is the nexus of world stability, and the most critical engagement between the powers is the diplomacy and propaganda drive for alliance with the Moslem peoples.

PROPAGANDA BARRAGE

Already, in the news backwash of England's swift and drastic action in deciding to divide Palestine, it has been made clear that this action was induced rather by reasons of Empire than by the immediate exigency of Jewish and Arab contention there. Italy and Germany, particularly Italy, have been laying down a terrific propaganda barrage over Arabia for the last two or three years.

Italian statesmen have proclaimed the "ideological conquest" of Africa and Arabia as equal in importance to military conquest. Over far desert wastes, the radio has shrieked the salvation of Islam to be brought by the Italians. Propagandists have ridden with the caravans, or filtered through the cellars and rabbit warrens of Bagdad, whispering down England, exalting the Fascist powers. . . .

Islam reawakening. Its millions in a new intellectual and political flux, hasn't been altogether credulous. English propagandists have talked that way, too. Its own agitators and propagandists are abroad, fervently preaching the unity and high destiny of all Islamic peoples.

SAFEGUARD EMPIRE

It knows it has tremendous trading and fighting assets in its oil, minerals, cotton and tobacco lands. It has shrewd and courageous leaders. It will be no rudy, heel-eating Kitchener who will bring Arabia into the British orbit. Subtler men are at work, and their subtlety is disclosed in the division of Palestine, as one of a number of forthright moves, devised at Downing street to safeguard the Empire.

The Arab section of Palestine will be added to adjoining Trans-Jordania, ruled by the powerful Emir Abdullah, strong in widening leadership of the three main Arab states and a dependable but reluctant ally of England, as against Italy and Germany.

The Emir was the companion-in-arms of T. E. Lawrence, "Lawrence of Arabia," and was a prodigy of valor in fighting the Turks in the World War.

Through Lawrence, British statesmen, Winston Churchill among them, led the Emir to believe the Arabs would be granted an independent sovereignty after the war. The historic betrayal of this implied if not actual promise led Lawrence to spurn kingly honors and bury himself as "Aircraftsman Shaw," repudiating the modern world and ending his life translating Homer.

KING HAS INFLUENCE

The Emir made his peace with the British. He received a degree of autonomy for Trans-Jordania, the English encouraging him to develop power as a ruler, but retaining economic suzerainty. In short, following her ancient rule, she "joined" the Emir.

The strengthening of the Emir's realm by the addition of Arabic Palestine is obviously Britain's safeguarding tactics as old Ibn Saud, ruler of Saudi Arabia, gets on in years. His health is failing and none of his sons has disclosed capacities for power or leadership.

The vigorous, intelligent, forceful 55-year-old Emir Abdullah can do much to solidify and stabilize Arabia—within the domain of British influence.

King Ibn Saud was the first to unite the Bedouins and of the first Arabian ruler to receive an outright grant of equal sovereignty from Britain—with some ironic strings on it, however. The build-up of the Emir Abdullah, with land added to his kingdom, is taken as an indication that Britain has turned to him for dependable Arabian leadership.

SWAYED BY POLITICS

The sides in their unholy strife clang, traverse desert and cities, importuning the people to defend their faith. There was a great civilization before they were overwhelmed by the Turks, 400 years ago. Fighting the Turks again in the World War, they believed they had won their right to cultural and political freedom. That dream vanished at Versailles.

There is a sharp foreshortening of the centuries as old Islam boils out on the modern highway. England is watchful and aggressive when her empire is at stake. Her action in Palestine probably solves nothing in the tragic and urgent problem of Zionism, but it is of historic importance into today's Armageddon of world politics.

On the Nail

By Benjamin DeCasseres

One year ago General Franco and his insurgent army landed from Morocco in Spain. The second greatest civil war of modern times had begun. No one can foresee the end.

The Associated Press estimates that ONE MILLION lives have been the toll to date, with TWICE AS MANY WOUNDED.

This is more than ONE-TENTH the population of Spain. The total deaths on both sides in our Civil War, which lasted four years, was not quite 500,000.

At that rate, if the Spanish Civil War should continue as long as our Civil War, there would be 4,000,000 DEAD and 8,000,000 WOUNDED. With a steadily declining birth rate, this would involve nearly ONE-HALF of the Spanish people.

The Civil War in Spain may not, of course, last so long—but it terribly reveals to us how a people may today be ALMOST WIPED OUT OF EXISTENCE BY WAR.

He was caught and served 14 years in prison. He afterward became a peaceful and successful citizen.

A comparison between the methods of the Dalton gang, the Jesse James gang and our gangs today gives the prizes for deportment to the "gentlemen roadsters" of the last century.

They did not show the cruelty and ruthlessness of our gangsters of today. Nor were they as promiscuous in killing as the outlaws of post-war America.

Maybe it was the handsome horses they rode and the military goatees they sported that somehow give us the illusion today that the bandits of the eighties and nineties were "almost gentlemen"—in comparison.

Isn't It So?

Women are not really more suspicious than men; they only think they are because they tell them anything—and that leaves them so much more to suspect.

Snootiness is out of fashion. Nobody practices high-hat these days, or tries to "keep-up-with-the-Joneses," except those deluded, dim-witted souls who still imagine that a Big Frong is more important than backbone.

Our friends think us better than we are but our enemies take every occasion to rub our faults into us.
